SPENCER ENRAGED IN COURT

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 21.—Bertram G. Spencer, on trial for the murder of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, made the most startling demonstration in court to-day that has taken place since the beginning of the remarkable trial.

Spencer leaped to his feet, his face distorted with rage, and in spite of the efforts of Turnkey Wade, the big policeman who sits with him in the cage, he made a bitter speech by denunciation of Dr. Alfred Elliott, superintendent of the Bridgewater Asylum for the Insane, in which he called him a liar and a murderer.

Wade and three or four other officers had to finally pile on top of the infuriated prisoner before they were able to subdue him. Then he was carried from the court room a quivering bundle of nerves. Court was adjourned for a time.

Feared Spencer's Escape.

Dr. Elliott was in court as an alienist for the State. The defence wanted to ask him some questions about Spencer, who was kept at Bridgewater several months under observation. At first, the doctor said on the witness stand, Spencer was placed in an ordinary observation cell.

"After a month Spencer was removed to the northwest portion of the building," the doctor said, "because he suspected that Spencer was planning to escape. A month later he was removed to another part of the building."

"Why was that done?" the doctor was asked.

"Because Spencer said he wanted to get into the yard."

That was as far as the witness got when he was interrupted by a violent shriek by Spencer, who stood in his cell, his eyes blazing.

"You lie!" shouted Spencer.

Turnkey Wade grabbed the prisoner and pulled him down. Mrs. Spencer, the wife of the prisoner, reached through the cage and tried to quiet her husband.

"He's a Liar."

"He's a liar—he's a liar," continued Spencer.

"You must not talk that way," said the Spencer.

"I will talk," cried Spencer, becoming more excited, "I want the court to know. I want the jury to know and I want every man and woman in this court room to know that that man is a contemptible liar."

Spencer was on his feet again. His wife, in tears and greatly frightened, begged to be allowed to enter the cage where her husband was, saying that she would be able to quiet him," but she was not allowed to enter the cage. Spencer, pointing to Dr. Elliott, continued:

"I begged and pleaded with that man to keep me out of that old smelly yard. I didn't want to go into the yard.

"You can kill me this minute, Judge, but you can't stifle the truth. You may choke it in my mouth and try to stop it, but I shall speak it.

"That man there is a contemptible liar and murderer. He has kicked in the ribs of unfortunate people at Bridgewater. He has murdered men, has dissected and buried their bodies in the fields for foxes to dig up. I've pleaded with him on my knees for better treatment."

Court in Uproar.

Spencer was leaning out of the cage, almost on top of the reporter for the AMERICAN. Turnkey Wade was unable to do anything with him. The courtroom was in an uproar. The faces of women in the room were blanched with fear. The sheriff and other officers got to the assistance of Wade and they forced the prisoner down to his seat by main strength. He was then taken from the room.

When court opened Spencer displayed the nervousness that has characterized him since the beginning of the trial. His wife, and mother and sister were by his side, outside the cage, and spoke encouragingly to him.

The first witness was Dr. Elliott. He was asked to present the report made by him to Chief Justice Aiken on Bertram G. Spencer, after Spencer had been sent to the hospital for observation. Judge Crosby refused to admit the report, but allowed Attorney Stapleton to examine him as to the subject matter of the report.

Q.—Mr. Bertram G. Spencer was taken to the hospital, did you observe him? A.—I did.

In Hospital Ten Months.

Q.—How long was Spencer at the hospital? A.—About ten months.

Q.—And did you make the monthly report to the Chief Justice? A.—I did, with the exception of one report when I was on my vacation.

Q.—And who made that report? A.—My assistant, Leonard A. Baker.

Q.—Is it true, Doctor, that in every institution for the insane in the State are a large number of inmates whom it is impossible to classify? A.—Not a large number.

Q.—How many inmates have you at Bridgewater? A.—In the vicinity of 800.

BERTHA HOFFMAN, VICTIM OF NORTH END HAIR SNIPPER

The Hofman girl and her young girl friend, who was with her on Hanover street when attacked by the "snipper," led the chase which resulted in the arrest of J. G. Derby.

GIRL'S STORY OF HAIR SNIPPING

John G. Derby, a barber arrested after a demonstration by a crowd in Hanover street, was arraigned to-day on a technical charge of assault and battery on Bertha Hoffman, a fourteen-year-old school girl. The alleged assault consisted of snipping off the little girl's long braid.

The story by the Hoffman girl is that she, with Mollie Eglichen, 46 Rochester street, left a North End drug store, when Derby, with a pair of barber's shears hidden in his side pocket, followed them and finally snipped the braid hanging down the Hoffman girl's back.

Here is the girl's own story as told to the court to-day.

"I lost my braid on Hanover street last night and I feel awfully bad. It makes my hair look queer. About 6 o'clock I was on my way to the Music Settlement House on Salem street to take my piano lesson. Mollie Eglichen was with me. She takes violin lessons at the Settlement House. We go to school together. She had an errand to do first, and we stopped at the drug store on Hanover street, where Mollie bought some medicine.

Felt Tug at Hair.

"After we came out of the drug store and were walking toward Salem street, I felt a tug at my hair. I thought it was some one taking my hair chaice. Naturally I looked around to see what was happening, and saw a man with a pair of shears in his hand. I also found that a long piece of my braid was gone.

"I asked the man with the shears what he had done to me, and he told me to 'shut up,' and he stamped his foot. He looked real angry and I was frightened at first, but when he started to run I chased him, and my chum Mollie ran after him, too.

"The man ran from one side of the street to the other and when he was near Scollay square he tried to jump on a car. It made me angry to lose my hair in that way. I was right after him all the time. When he tried to get on the street car it was crowded there was no room for me. All the time that I was chasing him, I shouted, 'Stop him!' at the top of my voice. Lots of other people joined in the chase. A man grabbed him and when I came up to him I told my story.

"He said that he didn't do it, but I heard a clang just like the sound real metal makes when it strikes a hard place. I told the man who was holding him. He pushed the crowd away, and there on the street lay my braid. Beside it was the man's shears. Then we came and took the man to the station house.

"I Feel Awful Bad."

"I feel awfully bad about my hair. It was a real long braid before it was cut off. I don't know him and never saw him before. He said he lived in Lynn. Now when I go to school all the other girls will notice that my hair is gone."

As soon as she felt the snip of the shears the little girl turned to her schoolmate and asked:

"Did he cut my hair?"

"Yes," answered the Eglichen girl, now the fellow-prisoner in pursuit of Derby, who had boarded a Hanover street car.

The car was held up by traffic and, screaming that he had lost some hair, the Hoffman girl succeeded in having Derby dragged from the car by a number of men whose attention she had attracted. In front of the Austrian Home Derby almost succeeded in convincing the crowd that he was innocent until the clatter of a pair of barber's shears on the sidewalk near his feet attracted the attention of his captors.

When Patrolman Fred Bean arrested Derby, in the pocket of the barber, police claim to have found a section of the snipped braid and also to have detected Derby as he was trying to throw several strands of it away.

DOROTHY DRAPER IS A BRIDE

Miss Dorothy Draper of Hopedale, only daughter of former Governor and Mrs. Eben S. Draper, became the bride of Thomas Brattle Gannett, Jr., a young Boston lawyer, residing at Cambridge and graduate of Harvard '97, at 12:30 this noon.

The wedding—a chrysanthemum bridal took place in the Memorial (Unitarian) Church at Hopedale, which the bride's parents and her uncle, George Draper, owner of Commonwealth avenue, gave to the parish.

Following the wedding came a reception from 1 to 3:30 at the Draper home, "The Ledges," on Adin road, Hopedale. Three hundred guests were at the wedding and 800 at the reception. Special trains were run from Boston to Hopedale to accommodate the Boston guests, including Providence, New York and the South were represented among the guests and the wedding and reception brought together both fashion and wealth. Among them was Miss Della Torrey of Millbury, President Taft's "Aunt Della."

After the reception the bridal couple slipped away in an automobile, bound presumably for Boston and thence for an ocean liner to take them on a honeymoon abroad. They will be at home after January 15 at No. 180 Beacon street, Boston. This is the famous Endicott mansion which Governor Draper recently purchased and which constitutes one of the parents' gifts to the bride.

Bride 910 Debutante.

The bride is one of last year's debutantes and she selected her bridesmaids from among her sister-debutantes of the same season. She is considered one of the most socially accomplished girls in the younger set. Her education was gained in leading schools and has been rounded out by extensive traveling. She has been around the world and early this year accompanied the Draper party to Alaska.

She is pre-eminently athletic, including her only riding, tennis and golf in her sports, but even basketball. Greatest at the Proffie House in the White Mountains two years ago recall the way in which Miss Dorothy Draper piloted for the girls team of that hotel.

As vice-president of the Vincent Club she was one of its leading members. She is a member of the new Chilton Club and the 1910 Spring Circle. When she returned from abroad two years ago she took up domestic science. Her friends say she is more proud of her cooking than of her music or dancing. Her knowledge of domestic duties is a lesson to many daughters of the rich.

Mr. Gannett, who took the ex-Governor's only daughter from the Draper home to-day, is a member of that conservative Cambridge set, which includes the Brattles and other old families. His home is at No. 3 Channing place. In Harvard he captained the Varsity golf team in 1896-7 and was president of the Harvard Golf Club.

After college he took up banking and is now a member of the banking firm of Parkinson & Burr on State street. His clubs are Tedesco, Harvard, Somerset, Racquet, Country, Myopia, Oakley, New York Harvard and University of Chicago.

Newark Girl Maid of Honor.

At 12 o'clock R. L. Wingate, organist of Arlington Street Church, began a half hour's prelude at the Memorial Church organ, and guests assembled rapidly. They were escorted to their seats by the following ushers: Edward L. Rantoul of Cambridge, Roger L. Scott of Milton, N. Penrose Hallowell of Milton, Robert H. Stetson, Jr., of Boston, Edward N. Fenne, Jr., of Boston, all classmates of the bridegroom; Paul M. Hamlin of Boston, Harvard, '96; H. B. Grow, Harvard, '96; Ralph W. Williams of Boston, Harvard, '96, and S. Draper, Jr., brother of the bride. Elliot Wadsworth, Harvard, '98; Francis B. Sargent, Jr., Harvard, '07, and Constantine Hutchins, Harvard, '08.

The church was decorated with pink chrysanthemums, orchids and ferns. The walls were fairly lined with little floral contributions.

The bridal party came from "The Ledges" to the church in half-mile detail in automobiles.

In the bridal procession the gowns of the attendants carried out the color scheme. The maid of honor was Miss Mildred Draper, of Newark, N. J., who was on the younger Alaskan party. She wore pink and sandalwood chiffon, embroidered over with of the same color, and carried a bouquet of white bouvardias.

THREE FINED FOR MILK VIOLATIONS

On complaint of James O. Jordan of the Bureau of Inspection of Milk, Jacob N. Seigel of 121-131 Fulton street, North End, Louis Klein of 188 C street, South Boston, and Israel Margolis of 146 Dorchester avenue, South Boston, were before Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court today. They were found guilty, Seigel was fined $20, and Klein and Margolis $25 each.

DOROTHY DRAPER

Miss Draper is a daughter of former Governor Eben S. Draper and made her debut two Winters ago.

YALE MEN GET RIOT APOLOGY

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 21.—The excitement over the student disturbance of Saturday night is quieting down, and the outlook now is that the whole affair will be closed without any law suits.

Manager Eldridge of the Hyperion Theatre has addressed a letter to the student body, in which he expresses regret at the occurrence, and says that much of the criticism of the Hyperion management was deserved.

The "intervention of the police," Mr. Eldridge says "on Saturday night was entirely unnecessary," because it was impossible to rehearse so large a cast on the short notice given by the police to cut the lines.

The fire hose, he says, was turned on by thoroughly frightened stage hands and was the most regrettable happening in the history of the theatre. The responsible party, if found, will be discharged. Mr. Eldridge says that the management will gladly make restitution individually to any whose garments were damaged by water.

FIRST ARREST FOR CHELSEA ATTACK

Joseph A. Pelous was arrested by Boston and Chelsea police to-day at No. 320 Dover street, charged with assault and battery on Charles H. McHatton of Chelsea, who is in a serious condition at Frost Hospital.

This is the first arrest in one of the most brutal assaults Chelsea has known for years. Mr. McHatton tried to pursue three men who had stolen his horse and wagon. He found them at the corner of Everett avenue and Arlington street, was set upon by one while the other concealed. McHatton was terribly beaten and has not recovered. He suffered concussion of the brain. His assailant fled, leaving his companions in the lurch.

The Chelsea police say they learned that Pelous was in the neighborhood. They charge him with committing the assault. He was taken to Chelsea after his arrest and was arraigned before Judge Bosson in the Chelsea District Court. He pleaded not guilty. The police asked for a continuance, pending the outcome of McHatton's case. He was held till November 29 in $1,000.

MAKES DIAMONDS OF MOTHER CRYSTALS

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—A new method of making diamonds has been discovered by Dr. Werner von Bolton, a chemist expert connected with the Siemens-Halske laboratory here. The process is based on the decomposition of boiling gas by a mercury amalgam, whereby the carbon contained in the gas is crystallized into diamonds. All these diamonds are extremely minute, small stones of considerable size are introduced into the apparatus, where they serve as mother crystals upon which larger diamonds are gradually built up.

DIES FROM SHOT IN HOTEL ROOM

With his skull shattered by a bullet which passed through his head, Frederick Whitcomb, thirty-seven, a traveling salesman, who attempted to commit suicide in a room at the Boston Tavern, died to-day at the Relief Hospital.

Whitcomb is said to have been employed by A. P. Smith & Company of East Orange, N. J., and to have had his home in Freehold, N. J. The police are trying to find his relatives. Correspondence brought on by business troubles is thought to have been the cause of his suicide.

MOVING PICTURES TO EXPLOIT WEST

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—President Hill says the Great Northern took 20,000 feet of moving picture films this year to take the Northwest into congested centres and display its amazing details.

3 KILLED IN FIRE AT NASHUA

NASHUA, N. H., Nov. 21.—A fire which swept through the Hotel Denton on Dearborn street, Nashua, near the Union Station to-day caused the death of three men by suffocation. Another man is in hospital suffering from the same cause. Two other men were injured. The dead are:

HARRY L. COREY of Nashua, thirty, unmarried.

PATRICK O'BRIEN of Lowell, sixty, with family.

The injured are:

JAMES MURRAY, affected by smoke.

DENNIS O'NEIL, proprietor of hotel, back wrenched.

The fire started, from some cause yet undetermined, about 4 a. m. and was discovered simultaneously from the outside and by occupants of the house. Mr. O'Neil, the landlord, says he is positive it was set on the outside and worked its way into the hotel and then to the stairway. The only exit, from the upper floors. Others think it started in the hotel office.

Mr. O'Neil says he was awakened by the noise of what he thinks was the windows of the office being driven in. He smelled smoke, immediately proceeded through the building, shouting "fire" and pounding on all the doors.

Jumped Eighteen Feet.

Eleven men were sleeping in the house. All except four were saved by jumping from the second-story windows or off the piazza roof, a distance of some eighteen feet to the ground. Mr. O'Neil himself walked off the piazza roof before he was aware he had reached the edge.

John Reeves, a Boston & Maine Railroad employe, was awakened before he was called by Mr. O'Neil. He says a large, heavy man whose name is unknown pounded on the plastering and rolled into his room. He threw a chair through the window, threw a mattress after it and then leaped upon the mattress in his bed clothing. He was stopping at the hotel because there is a scarcity of rooms in Nashua, which is near there. He ran home and dressed.

Four Found Unconscious.

Four unconscious men were found by the firemen. They were all living and were hurried to the hospitals in ambulances and fire wagons. Two were discovered in their rooms on the floors, one under the bed where he had evidently tried to evade the smoke; one was in the hallway and one man had gone as far as the roof of the piazza. The four men were brought down ladders by the firemen. None had actually been burned by flames, but fatal asphyxiation by smoke overtook them. Patrick O'Brien, 59, sometimes registered under the name of Patrick McCarthy, has a family in Lowell. He had come to Nashua to work on the new addition to the Paper Company, which has a factory near the hotel. He was taken to the Nashua Hospital and was dead when the place was reached.

Harry L. Corey was also dead on reaching the hospital. He was an employe of the paper company. He had lived most of his life in Nashua and was in the High School in the class of 1895.

James McGuire died at St. Joseph's Hospital at 5:30 a. m. He is a railroad brakeman.

Proprietor Injured.

Dennis O'Neil, the proprietor of the house, has a badly strained back from his fall. Richard E. Hallisey, the fire driver, got his injury by being thrown from his seat by the jarring of the apparatus when it came to the fire.

Steamer 2 from the Central Fire Station ran into the Holbrook Marshall building on the corner of Hollis and Dearborn streets, when making the turn from Spring street. Both accidents were due to the slippery pavements. The accident was delayed by the breaking of a pole, but neither men nor horses were injured.

The building, which is a three-story brick, was owned by Mrs. Mary O'Neil in 1903 and has since been run by him as a lodging house. His loss on hotel and furniture is about $2,000. The house was insured for $1,000, and no woman was in it at the time of the fire, not even a chambermaid.

Police Sergeant Dennis Halligey sent a detail of men to the scene when the alarm came in at 4:35, and also summoned the doctors as soon as he learned of the injured persons. Medical Referee Herbert L. Smith went to the Nashua Hospital.

City Physician A. F. Mulvaney went to St. Joseph's Hospital and Dr. W. P. Rood of the Board of Health to the scene of the fire.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

WM. H. RUSSELL, 4

CHELSEA VOTES AT PRIMARIES

The polls opened in Chelsea at noon today, to remain open until 9 o'clock tonight for the primaries under the new charter, in which at least two candidates for each office were to be chosen for the final election in December. There were six candidates for Mayor of Chelsea and in all there were forty aspirants for the aldermanic seats in the city. No party designations appear on the ballots.

To-day's preliminary election was the most unique in the history of Chelsea, and the voting at the various precinct booths was marked by the absence of paid workers and the use of hired vehicles for bringing out the vote.

For Mayor the candidates in the order in which they appear on the ballots were: Former Mayor Willard, Commissioner Alvin E. Briggs of the Board of Control; George W. Ford, assessor; Fletcher Osgood, scholar; James H. Malone, school committeeman; Commissioner George H. Dubbin of the Board of Control.

Friends of Mr. Willard declared that he was certain to get a place on the December ballot. School committeeman Malone and Commissioner Dunham were the favorites for the second place on the ballot.

For aldermen-at-large there were nine candidates for the two-year term, four of whom will land on the December ballot. Two will be elected next month. For the one year term there were also nine candidates, two of whom will be elected in December. In the different wards with one exception the contests for the aldermanic nomination were close.

FOSS REFUSES TO EXTRADITE BERMAN

Governor Foss to-day refused to honor the requisition papers issued by Governor Baldwin of Connecticut for the extradition of Louis Brooks and Nathan Berman, chairman and business agent of Boston Joint Council of Cloak and Skirt Makers' Unions, wanted in that State for alleged conspiracy to ruin the business of Sanford Sheriff of Hebron, Ct. In his letter to Governor Baldwin he says in part:

"I cannot let this communication go forth without an expression of regret that I should be in a position where I am constrained to refuse any request of Your Excellency. I have given the matter the following careful review of the affidavits accompanying your request for such requisition, any action will meet with Your Excellency's approval."

Governor Foss holds that the affidavits in question positively show that Brooks and Berman are not fugitives from justice, as previously charged by the Connecticut authorities. And this despite the fact that, at a hearing called at the Governor's chamber several weeks ago, Attorney-General Swift advised the deportation of the two labor leaders.

ELEVEN MINERS CRUSHED TO DEATH

NORDHAUSEN, Prussian Saxony, Nov. 21.—Eleven miners were crushed to death and another fatally hurt in a fall of rock in a government potash mine here to-day.

DETROIT, Nov. 21.—The government's criminal cases against the three and individuals in the Bathtub Trust will begin in the Federal Court here January 30.

RUSTLERS' HEAD DIES SUDDENLY

William Hepburn Russell, president and chief owner of the Boston National League Baseball Club for the past two years, died to-day at his home in New York at No. 145 Ninety-seventh street.

News of his death, which was not entirely unexpected, was received at the Boston office of the club in the Paddock building by long distance telephone at 10:30 a. m.

No details of his death were given. It was said in the offices, though, that death was undoubtedly due to heart failure, following an illness which began three years ago.

Mr. Russell's last visit to Boston, which he claimed as a joint residence with New York, was in October. At that time he had come up from Hot Springs, Va., where he had gone in search of health and rest. He occupied his apartments at the Touraine for about two weeks, and on October 29 found himself so seriously ill that he went to his family in New York.

Ill for Three Years.

On the orders of his physician he went to bed and practically never arose from it.

About three years ago Mr. Russell underwent a serious operation in a New York Hospital. After which he never really recovered. The first year that he took charge of the Boston club he was in extremely poor health and on the car trips he made with the team found it necessary to be accompanied by doctors.

On the Spring training tour of that first year he was attacked by a succession of hemorrages in his hotel in Augusta and it was feared then that he could not survive.

A widow and six children, five girls and a boy, are left by the dead magnate. One of the daughters and the son, Todd Russell, are married.

Dovey Died Suddenly.

Secretary Dovey of the Boston Rustlers said to-day that the club was unprepared to issue a statement on the death of its president. He did not believe, however, that it would have any affect on the club affairs and that Manager Tenney would proceed with the program for next year which he and Mr. Russell had agreed upon earlier in the Fall.

The annual meeting of the directors of the Boston club will be held next month. If any changes are to be made they will probably be announced then.

Twice now within three years has the owner of the Boston Nationals been claimed by death. George B. Dovey, president and owner of the club in 1908, handing it over the property from Messrs Soden, Conant and Billings, famous as the Boston "triumvirate" of that day, sold the club by his brother, John C. S. Dovey, who after a year of stormy management sold his holdings to Edward A. Harris, the Pittsburg theatrical man. Mr. Harris in turn sold the majority of his stock to Mr. Russell a little more than a year ago.

Russell Secured Tenney.

An obituary column is scarcely the place for criticism of a man's business politics, but it should be noted here that one of the most sweeping changes made in the Boston team since the days when it was the champion of the National League were made under Mr. Russell's direction.

It was he who brought Fred Tenney back to the city and, notwithstanding his own private feelings over the event, he made him the club manager.

It was Mr. Russell also who put through the deal which brought Mike Donlin, Kling, old Cy Young and other famous diamond stars to the Hub.

Only a day or two ago a news dispatch from the West announced that Kansas City and Cincinnati capital had been joined for the purchase of the Boston club, and that was made in Boston at the report. Perhaps the death of Mr. Russell will result in a sale.

Native of Missouri.

Mr. Russell was born in Hannibal, Mo., in 1857. His father, however, was born in New Hampshire, a fact of which Mr. Russell was proud. He used to say that he felt himself a New Englander in every sense of the word.

During his youth he lived in Hannibal and worked on a newspaper in that town for a time. He was the pet hope of the town that he had his experience as a baseball player, for he was the leading member of the club that claimed the championship of the State for a number of years in the early nineties. This was an amateur club, but from its ranks came many players who later became known on the national diamond.

For instance, it was at that time that Mr. Russell found and developed Jake Beckley, who later became a star first baseman in the National League for several years. Beckley was at that time a carrier for the paper on which Mr. Russell worked, and those who knew him say that Russell thought Beckley all he ever knew about the game.

The early '90s found Russell deeply in of dements? A.—No, the two classifications you mention are not similar; they are entirely separate.

Q.—Did you have Spencer classed as a dement? A.—No.

Q.—How did you have his classed? A.—We had him there for observation and classed as a delinquent.

Differences in Patients.

Q.—Is insane person and an imbecile the same? A.—No, there is a great difference. A sane man may be an imbecile and not insane.

Q.—What is the difference between a defective delinquent and an insane person? A.—A defective delinquent may not be insane at all.

Q.—How do you define insanity? A.—Well, we look carefully into the history of the case first. Insanity is divided up into a number of distinct diseased conditions. There was a time when the profession believed that there was just one kind of insanity that a patient was insane and that that was all there was to it. Now, we inquire into conditions, ascertain causes and watch closely the patient, and determine one of the different many classes of insanity.

Q.—How frequently did you examine Spencer? A.—Almost daily.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I talked with him in the ward. I had him come to my house. Sometimes our talk lasted two hours. I examined thoroughly into his case, his history, environment, and made a study of his every action as far as I could at the institution.

Q.—Where was he placed when he was first brought to the institution? A.—He was placed in E building on the second floor.

Q.—And what class of patients do you have there? A.—This is where we keep the bright class of patients; those who are not vicious and who are tidy about themselves.

Q.—Was Spencer removed from this ward? A.—Yes.

Q.—And when? A.—About a month after he reached the institution.

Q.—Where was he placed then? A.—In building M, what we call the northeast building.

Q.—What class of patients are in this building? A.—Those who might try to injure themselves or attempt to escape.

Q.—How long did Spencer remain there? A.—He remained there about a month.

Q.—Why was he put in this building? A.—From information I received and accumulative evidence, I thought that Spencer was planning to escape.

Q.—How long a month was he removed again? A.—Three.

Q.—Where? A.—Back to E building.

Q.—Did you put him in the same ward where he was at first? A.—No.

Q.—Why was he moved from the northeast building, where you say he might have escaped and where he was taken to prevent his escape, back to the E building? A.—I decided he could be taken care of in the E building, and he wanted to get better quarters, to have the corridor where he could wander about in and he got one more in the yard. (It was at this point Spencer denounced the witness as a liar.)

Puzzle Over Letter.

While the experts for the defence were testifying, while the prisoner was trembling in every fibre as he sat in his steel cage, and while mother, wife and sister wept and affectionately patted the quivering figure, alienists for the defence puzzled themselves over a letter written by Spencer to a distant cousin in California. It was written from his prison cell. In it he repeated the charges of cruelty against his father, placed upon his father responsibility for his plight, admitted the killing of Miss Blackstone, regretted that he could not have seen pa put away somewhere before the "awful thing" happened and expressed himself ready to meet death.

The letter was presented in evidence by Spencer's counsel in the form of a deposition from Mrs. Anita Martland of Oakland, Cal., a distant cousin of the prisoner's, whom he favored among all his relatives and whom he visited in 1904.

Its reading caused a partial breakdown of Spencer, while his mother, wife and sister gave way to tears. It was turned over to Dr. George T. Tuttle for the alienists of the Commonwealth, and became at once the object of intense study. It so remains. Remarkable as well as the letter itself will be the conclusions of both sides as to the sanity or insanity of the writer. In the letter Spencer said:

Dear Cousin Nettie—It's time I sat down and wrote you a long letter, Nettie, telling you how thankful I am to you for sending words of cheer and money, whereby I could be supplied with comforts which are few, but those few are more than appreciated. Nothing but mail, papers, magazines, washing and flowers are allowed, and everything is read and searched for fear something will be sent in, and everything the same going out, and they keep a man with me, fearing will do harm to myself, night and day.

Life Full of Pitfalls.

Colly was allowed to buy me cards, checkers and dominoes to help take up my mind, as this is an awful, awful place, and I'll get out for my wife and baby and dear old mother I should pray for relief through death, and it may come as it is, but whatever the outcome I shall do it for the best. Have lost my youngest boy since I came here, but look at it all for the best. Bertram, Jr., is growing fast, and will soon be able to walk. Mindie comes over Tuesdays and Fridays, and Colly comes almost every day, except Saturdays. Sundays are my days. I am not allowed to see anyone but my lawyers, and they hardly ever come on those days.

I am allowed only one sheet of paper per day and I have to write all letters with a lead pencil but law is law and the way of the transgressor is hard, and my whole life as you know has been a rough one, full of snares and pitfalls, Nettie, I am sure that my whole life would have been different if father had have treated me differently, but he did not and by his cruel treatment we all had to leave our dwelling and homes and as far as mother was concerned it was all right for she treated us all so kindly and on the other hand so different.

So you know, Nettie, I have found this double self as no one knows and through strife I have come up against dealings within myself a week if I had not, with the grace of God, I think fifteen years ago I could have been put up against the awful thing which would never have occurred. This occurred April 5, 1910, when but nine years and nine months before I had to repeat April 5, 1910 and with my temper that has followed me since and of a flash notice has been the cause of many a sorrow ever before. But I have longed and wished were never so, and still I'll be grateful I'll thank God for both of the many happy times I had while at 1274, that there are all gone like poor Velma.

"Drowned by Screams."

She is better off, Nettie though its hard, to part with loved ones, but we have all got to go sooner or later so no matter how or when things are, I seem there is a gleam of sunshine for me all some where. My trial comes off the 10th of September at 9:30 a. m. It's strange to me Nettie that so many money as I have been trusted with and only once did I take from my employer and hundreds of thousands of dollars have been intrusted to me and I never thought of taking a penny and to think I should be charged with that was good and steal here and in every way that I have been and end up by killing a poor defenceless woman all on account of a quarrel over a few dimes. All from harm. Love & kisses and best wishes to you and dear old Grandma. Again thanking you for all your kindnesses in every way and to hear from you if only a word. Your loving Cousin, BERT.

P. S.—Mother is not very well but is trying, and will do harm to her no sake. Poor old Mother how much she has had to suffer.

GOVERNESS SAVES YOUNG VANDERBILT

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 21.—Prompt action on the part of his governess probably saved young William H. Vanderbilt from injury. Young Vanderbilt and his governess were walking along Casteaux avenue and were about to pass the gate of the Spencer estate when a horse and rig belonging to Letter Carrier Crowther came out at a fast clip. Vanderbilt was about to step across the gateway when his governess hauled him back. The letter carrier had jumped out of his rig before reaching the gate to save himself from an approaching wagon horse behind him.

NEW CORPORATION TO AID HANDICRAFT

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 21.—The Crafters Company, a $10,000 corporation, is Cincinnati's latest experiment in educational ethics. It will be open November 28 at No. 142 East Fourth street.

Only those who can be entered by any worker until it has passed a examination by a jury composed of five prominent Cincinnatians. The purpose is to encourage skilled and artistic handicraft. Producers will be given an opportunity to sell their handiwork and also be urged to further improvement by intelligent criticism.

Miss Sears at the Horse Show

Miss Sears sat in the Vanderbilt box at Madison Square Garden last evening after dancing without her cane, which she has used since she became temporarily lame. Sketch by American artist, George Wickham.

ELEONORA SEARS DANCE SURPRISE

Miss Eleonora Sears, who is the guest of the Vanderbilts in New York attending the Horse Show, pulled off a "show stunt" for an infinite circle of her friends in the 400 just to "show" that though she has to walk with a cane she is still the same kipper athletic girl the newspapers have always said she was.

When Miss Sears was about to enter the Vanderbilt box in Madison Square Garden, the band struck up the lively air "Alexander." The strain—musical, not the physical pain—was too much for her. So the disabling young girl cast aside the cane she has been compelled to use on account of her lameness. And right there on the steps, Miss Sears cheerily danced to the jaunty ragtime tune.

Surprised Her Friends.

Her little feat—referring to the dance, not the dancing feet—caught the fashionable onlookers by surprise. There were impediately "bravos! encore" calls for Miss Reginald C. Vanderbilt, her hostess, Mrs. Lyttleton Fox and Mrs. Sidney Hunt, who stood nearby, and a few others.

For the exclusive set, and young Harold Vanderbilt, with whom fetching Miss Eleonora has been reported engaged, her dancing was easily the feature at the show. Miss Sears explained to them that her lameness hasn't taken away all her spirit. The dance seemed to have done her good, for her limp disappeared for a while, though when she left with her friends, she had to walk with the aid of the cane again.

Miss Sears wore a tailored blue cloth suit, neatly plain but beauteous because the wearer was Miss Sears. The suit was made with a moderately long coat, and in the lapel she wore a single orchid. Her tailored black hat was of beaver.

The Jewelry Exhibit.

For several days Miss Sears has been receiving the sympathies of her friends, who noticed that her walking seemed to be a painful performance. One athletic young girls dancing however, gave her friends new hope that she will be able to discard her cane entirely within a few days.

At the night performance Miss Sears sat in the midst of the jewelry exhibit, so called, because of the diamonds and pearls that flashed under the electric lights. She is attracting much attention and the Vanderbilt box continues to be one of the centres of interest at the show.

PRESCRIBES HOME AS SQUABBLE CURE

Housekeeping has been recommended as a cure for family squabbling by Judge Sweetser in the Malden District Court. The case under consideration was that of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Neagle of Medford. James claimed that his wife's people were hardening her and Mrs. Neagle asserted that her husband's mother was keeping her money away from her. It was then that Judge Sweetser took a hand. He told the parents of the young pair of gold, with an orchid bretelle lace waistline that was of brown velvet with gloves to match.

DOROTHY DRAPER A BRIDE TO-DAY

guret Richardson, Miss Amy Peabody, Miss Catherine Saltonstall of Boston and Miss Rosamund Otis, daughter of Dr. Otis, who has recently returned from Vienna. The bridesmaids wore pink chrysanthemum chiffon, made with Directoire gowns, and carried pink chrysanthemum bouquets completed their festive array.

Bride Escorted by Father.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore white satin, with a court train. The bodice of exquisite Brussels lace was adorned with rhinestone ornaments. Her veil was of Carrick-Macross applique lace, also carried a shower bouquet of White orchids and lilies of the valley. This attire brought out in high relief the brunette charms of the bride, who seemed the picture of girlish happiness.

Mr. Garnett was attended by Robert F. Gannett, his brother, as best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frederic B. Lewis, pastor of the church. The modified Episcopal service, with singing, was used.

For the reception at The Ledges, a temporary apartment sixty by sixty, had been added to the west wing of the house. This addition and the ground floor rooms of the main structure were elaborately decorated similar to the church.

The reception was brilliant. Elaborate toilettes were worn. Mrs. Eben S. Draper received. He told the parents of the young pair of gold, with an orchid bretelle lace waistline that was of brown velvet with gloves to match.

CLAIRVOYANT SAYS MISSING MAN IS SAFE

MACHIAS, Me., Nov. 21.—Several hundred volunteers are sweeping the forests and dragging the river in hopes of finding some tidings of Wilbur L. Peterson, who is missing from Columbia Falls. A clairvoyant in Boston has been consulted and says that Peterson is all right and will return in the same way in which he disappeared. He was dressed only in a night gown when he left home Saturday morning.

HAIR HEALTH warranted to Restore youthful color and beauty to GRAY HAIR. Use only Hay's Hair Health. Most satisfactory Hair grower. Stops dandruff, hair falling and scalp diseases. Clears DARK spots. Don't stain skin or linen. Large 50 cent bottles, at leading druggists.

BEAUTIFUL, LUSTROUS, HEAVY HAIR AND NO DANDRUFF OR ITCHY SCALP.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast.

A little Danderine tonight—now—anytime—will surely save your hair. Ten minutes after applying all the dandruff will disappear, all itching will cease and there will be no more falling hair. Millions of men and women use Knowlton's Danderine and they never have dandruff, itchy scalp or falling hair—they know that it keeps the scalp clean and healthy and makes the hair grow heavy, long and beautiful.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application you will say it was the best investment you ever made. Your hair will immediately take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

HETTY GREEN 76 AND BUSY

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—This is Mrs. Hetty Green's birthday. She is seventy-six years old and as active as a woman thirty-five years her junior. She was too busy making money to celebrate the anniversary, and she spent the day at her desk in the office of the Westminster Company at No. 111 Broadway.

"I'm too busy to talk to-day," she said. "Come back next month and I'll give you an interview."

"But it's your birthday, Mrs. Green."

"Yes," she said, "and I had almost forgotten it."

Mrs. Green, wearing a brand new black silk dress and a bonnet to match, continued to give directions to her secretary.

Mrs. Green has stopped riding in the surface cars. "Eddie" has a big stay-horse-power automobile, and Mrs. Green plans down to her office in the machine at 9 o'clock every morning, and the chauffeur calls for her at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

YOU SURELY MUST TRY THIS WHEN YOU HAVE A BAD COLD OR GRIPPE

You will distinctly feel your cold breaking and all the Grippe symptoms leaving after taking the very first dose.

It is a positive fact that Pape's Cold Compound, taken every two hours, until three consecutive doses are taken, will end the Grippe and break up the most severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach or limbs.

It promptly relieves the most miserable headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

Take this harmless compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other remedy made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

MRS. NORA MELLON, SUED FOR DIVORCE, AND YOUNG SON

Mrs. Nora McMullen Mellon, who is being sued for divorce by her husband, Andrew W. Mellon, is here shown. The child in her arms is her youngest, Paul, aged four. The Mellon case is that in which the acoustiqone figures.

RUNAWAY LAD LOSES A FOOT

Fifteen-year-old Edward McMahon, who, with a playmate, Arthur Hanson, ran away from his home in Beverly in order to see President Taft, was picked up to-day just outside of Washington with his foot crushed by the wheels of a freight car from which he had fallen. He was taken to the Casualty Hospital, where the physicians found it necessary to amputate his left foot. Hidden in freight cars the boys had made their way to Washington.

BEGIN MELLON DIVORCE TRIAL

Edison's inventive genius will figure as a factor at the trial of the divorce suit of Andrew W. Mellon, the Pittsburg multi-millionaire who seeks annulment of his marriage to his beautiful wife.

The acoustiqone, a wonderful electrical device which magnifies a whisper or other sounds to 1,000 times its tone will contribute evidence in the form of all conversations that occurred in the Mellon mansion from the time laborers or more secret contrivances were secretly installed at the solicition of the husband at heavy expense.

A brother of Mr. Mellon had seen an acoustiphone demonstrated in Europe. He told Andrew of it. Unable to trust his wife from the forest avenue mansion, Mr. Mellon decided secretly to bring about a complete equipment of acoustiphones. He conferred with Edison's representatives and was informed that the invention had not been technically completed, but special arrangements were made and during Mrs. Mellon's temporary absence the workmen set them up.

Two were placed in the sun parlor, two in the drawing room, four in Mrs. Mellon's bedroom, one in the front hall and four others at various points throughout the house. The first instrument was placed in the drawing room, where Mrs. Mellon received her lawyers. It was incased in a black box and the wires connected with it under a baby grand piano.

Expert stenographers concealed in adjoining rooms are alleged to have converted every syllable uttered by Mrs. Mellon and her lawyers into a volume of dots, curves and dashes which have since been translated into longhand. The wife's action was kindred to that of the entire Carnegie household in the suspendous operations of the Pittsburg coal and steel interests. Its fortune is roughly appraised at $25,000,000. His wife is the daughter of the celebrated brewer McMullen, and at her marriage was said to be the richest heiress in point in the United Kingdom. She refused half a dozen titled suitors before Mr. Bell bestowed a moving freight car, eight cars passing over his body. Both his legs were amputated below the knees. Smart also claims that his arm was broken.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN MOURNS SQUARE PAL

"He was the squarest man I have ever met, and if I had a million dollars I would have given it to him," declared John L. Sullivan at his home in North Abington, yesterday, told of the death of Michael T. Clarke, liquor dealer and sport ing man, who died suddenly at the close of business, Dover street and Shawmut avenue. Sullivan's former partner was also a personal friend of Clarke's for many years and said most of Clarke's friends had resorted him in his hour of need and allowed him to die of a broken heart.

BACK BROKEN, ASKS $50,000 OF RAILROAD

LAWRENCE, Nov. 21.—Forest G. Smart of Haverhill, a freight brakeman, has instituted suit against the Boston & Maine Railroad for $50,000 for injuries received in an accident at Ward, Lawrence, April 25. Smart claims the accident was caused by a defective brake. He fell between a moving freight car, eight cars passing over his body. Both his legs were amputated below the knees. Smart also claims that his arm was broken.

MINISTER PAYS RICHESON VISIT

The Rev. John E. Cracknell of No. 140 Shirley avenue, Revere, called at Charles street jail today to see the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson.

Pastor Cracknell has made a deep study of prison life. He is seventy-seven years old, of the Baptist faith, and has paid hundreds of visits of consolation to imprisoned people.

He has pronounced views on imprisonment and punishment. He does not believe in executions. He hopes to see capital punishment abolished in Massachusetts. He urges that, so far as general imprisonment goes, malefactors should be transformed so that they will lead better lives and not merely brutalized by punishment.

He has followed the Linnell murder case since the name of Pastor Richeson was brought into it.

Deep Interest in Case.

Mr. Cracknell is particularly interested in Richeson's case because the prisoner is not only a brother clergyman, but a fellow Baptist. This is the first time, in all his prison visitations, that Mr. Cracknell has had occasion to pay a prison call to a clergyman of his own faith. He has kept in touch with all court proceedings and studied each day's developments.

"Pastor Richeson has not yet been convicted," says Mr. Cracknell, "and I think in the legal presumption of his innocence. I have twice been on the point of visiting him before, but have been unable to."

Sees but Few Visitors.

At the Charles street Jail Pastor Richeson can see only a few visitors. So far he has been getting only frequent visits from his counsel, Philip R. Dunbar; from the prospective father-in-law, Moses G. Edmands, and others immediately connected with his welfare.

John L. Lee, the Virginia attorney, who was picked out by Richeson's father, Thomas Variand Richeson, to assist in the defence, is expected back from professional engagements in the South by December 1. Then the Richeson defence will be ready to complete its plans.

Pastor Richeson takes daily exercise in the jail, reads much and causes no trouble to Sheriff Seavey and other jail officers.

A TONIC FOR THE STOMACH

Many People Who Think They Are Dyspeptics Need Only to Have Their Digestive Apparatus Toned Up.

Much of the dieting and treatment for stomach trouble is worse than the disease and often aggravates it.

Tone up the stomach so it will do its part rather than cut down the diet to suit a weak stomach. Reduced nourishment means reduced strength for the entire system including the stomach. To restore the weak stomach to strength and health, it must be supplied with plenty of pure, red blood, for every act of digestion needs healthy blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People meet all the requirements of a good tonic for the stomach because they are an unequalled blood-builder. The pure, rich blood which they make stimulates and increases the flow of the digestive fluids, removes any irritability of the stomach, restores and strengthens the nerves, and supplies the stomach with the needed strength.

Mr. Howard S. Urban, a blacksmith, of Wrightsville, York Co., Pa., who was cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, says:

"Sometime ago I began to be troubled with indigestion and my stomach became so weak that I frequently had to vomit after eating. Food felt like a dead weight in my stomach and would ferment, causing gas to form. I was troubled with dizziness and when I straightened up suddenly after bending over, I would see black specks before my eyes.

"I was under a doctor's care more or less of the time for six months but he failed to help me. I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in a book and concluded to try them. I used several boxes of the pills, as they helped me from the first, and was completely cured."

For a more complete explanation of the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in stomach troubles, send today for a free copy of our booklets, "What to Eat and How to Eat."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should also be used in anæmia, rheumatism, nervousness and sciatica because of their power to make rich, new blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Restful Nights At Last!

A sufferer from insomnia, lying awake, starting at every distant noise, and whose tortured mind imagines every trivial circumstance, must have relief, and right here a great discovery is announced. It embodies simply, depress and deaden, but leave the starved, overfatigued nerves weaker than ever when the influence of the drug abates.

They are composed of narcotics, bromides, opiates and their derivatives, and it is no wonder that many an innocent user suddenly finds himself in the powerful grip of a vicious habit, difficult or impossible to break.

JAROMA

will relieve natural rest and wholesome sleep by relieving nerve strain. They contain no poisonous or habit-forming drugs and for that reason are recommended by the Medical Profession and indorsed by leading medical journals, viz.:

"The American Medical Digest," May, 1911, page. "The Medical Council," June, 1911, page. "The International Journal of Surgery," May, 1911, page. "The American Journal of Clinical Medicine," June, 1911, issue.

At Your Druggist, 50c. a box.
Booklet on Insomnia upon request.

JAROMA CO., 80 Fulton St., N. Y.

For sale at all Hiker-Jarsom drug stores and all other druggists.

HEARST FIGHTS PRIMARY LAW

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—In accordance with the request of William R. Hearst, Herbert R. Limburg, who upset the Lévy Elections Law, will hasten court proceedings at once for the annulment of the most vicious features of the Ferris-Blauvelt Primary Law.

Mr. Limberg was engaged to-day in drawing papers intended to have the "Inalienable" Primary Nomination Act declared unconstitutional.

Among the grounds on which the wiping out of many of the objectional provisions of the Ferris-Blauvelt Act is sought are these:

It permits placing the name of a candidate for office or party position on the official ballot but omits that preventive the nomination by one faction of a candidate already nominated by another.

It presents to a machine boss absolute ownership of the party emblem.

It permits the misappropriation of campaign funds for the use of one faction against another at a party primary.

It gives the machine candidate first place on the official ballot.

It enables committees, through their boss, practically name their successors in perpetuity.

"William Randolph Hearst has asked me to look into the new primary law," said Mr. Limburg to-day. "After examining certain features I am satisfied a number of them can be attacked as unconstitutional. I have advised Mr. Hearst that there are many bad features and that it is possible to secure a determination for the highest court as to their constitutionality prior to the Spring primaries of the presidential year.

"After considering the matter fully, Mr. Hearst has deemed it wise to have proceedings instituted at once and has asked me to do so. Suits will be brought within a few days in the Supreme Court involving the constitutionality of the provisions.

"Undoubtedly the courts can and will give a remedy for some of the most vicious provisions, and I trust the Legislature will move quickly toward eliminating them also.

"Mr. Hearst, I know, has acted purely from a sense of public duty and seeks relief for the people from intolerable conditions.

"Much should be said about our judicial scandal and about the tender and sale and sanctioning off of nominations. Anything to do is to put it out of the power of any one man to tender or sell a nomination. This can be done by the enactment of a real honest direct primary law."

BOSTON CITY CLUB CHOOSES DIRECTORS

The Boston City Club, at its annual meeting, elected the following directors: John A. Coultrust, David A. Ellis, W. T. A. Fitzgerald, James M. Head, Samuel E. Hubbard, James W. Hollins, Dr. David D. Scannell and Charles H. Thurber. They will serve for three years. Next Thursday night the twenty-four directors of the club will meet and elect officers.

WOBURN DEMOCRATS NAME CANDIDATES

The list of Democratic aspirants for caucus nominations in Woburn comprises: For Mayor, Hugh D. Murray; William H. Hershey; for Board of Public Works, William H. Conway, Thomas H. Cannon, Dennis D. Blake, General J. S. Anderson; for Aldermen-at-large, James Boyle, James Corcoran, J. Josiah Meserve, Frank B. Sullivan, William G. Kelley, Jesse J. Geary, Thomas E. Callahan, John H. Durfee.

SAGE TEA DARKENS THE HAIR AND RESTORES COLOR TO FADED AND GRAY HAIR

There is nothing new about the idea of using sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our great-grandmothers kept their locks soft, dark and glossy by using a "sage tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance they made a brew of sage leaves and applied it to their hair, with wonderfully beneficial effect.

Nowadays we don't have to resort to old-time methods of gathering the herbs and making the tea. This is done by skillful chemists, better than we could do it ourselves, and all we have to do is to call for the ready-made product, Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, containing sage in the proper strength, with the addition of sulphur, another old time restorative.

The manufacturers of this remedy authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

Don't neglect your hair. Get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur today, and notice the difference after a few days' use.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

CHILDREN LOVE DR. VAN ALLEN

Rev. Dr. William H. Van Allen, rector of the Church of the Advent, likes to play with children. They like to play with him, too, for he knows so many games that appeal to them. When a party of children want to play something, they ask Dr. Van Allen and he is always equal to the emergency.

Every Friday evening in the vestry of his church, he is giving free lectures upon the many children that he met in various parts of Europe this past Summer. These lectures have grown very popular with all classes of people, but especially among the children, who delight in hearing the doctor describe the way that children play games in Holland and other countries.

No children are so fond of him as the children in the various cities of Holland. When he goes away every Summer, he makes it a point to tell the children that he met on a previous tour. As soon as he tells them how that he is coming, they flock to the little station of the town, where he is well known, and the children give him a royal welcome.

He tells them about the boys and girls in his own land, what they are doing and what games they take part in. He improves very interesting incidents. Last Summer, in Paris, he was in a central place and spied over the station, which they take great delight in touring.

Many of these children have had their photographs taken with him sitting with them. One of the villages in which he has spent some time, is known as Zandyk, stretching along the western Zee with its story and a half cottages. He knows many of the children of this town, and calls them all by their strange names.

There is Willemina, Janna, Betje, Digna and Koos and many more. Dr. Van Allen has taken many pictures of these children. Willemina, who is ten years of age, and Martina, nine years, make him stand this Summer and have a picture taken.

Dr. Van Allen is fond of this picture. He will show it in his lecture next Friday evening and will speak on this charming little place where he spent so many happy days with the children, watching them playing their different games. When he parted with them a month ago, they went down to the station and told him to come again and bring them some more news about the happy boys and girls in America.

COL. WATTERSON WILL SPEAK TO-NIGHT

Colonel Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, and Melville E. Stone, of New York, general manager of the Associated Press, are to be the guests of honor this evening at the twentieth anniversary banquet of the Boston Press Club at the Hotel Somerset. Governor Charles H. Taylor will be toastmaster and the editors of the Boston daily papers will be special guests. President M. E. Hennessy of the club will preside at the banquet.

COUPLE DIVORCED TWICE WED AGAIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Mr. and Mrs. Michael B. Flaherty, twice wed and twice divorced, are married again and started on a third honeymoon trip. Mrs. Flaherty had resumed her maiden name of Laura M. Smith after the second divorce from Flaherty. An Alderman performed the ceremony.

HARVARD GAME, BUT NO MORGAN

It may be good news to a lot of Harvard men working in banks, law offices and for brokerage firms in Boston and other cities to learn that they have hung one up on Mister Morgan.

Yes, the same Mister J. Pierpont Morgan who has so much money that he has been known to try to run the earth.

But with all his money the banker is not going to see the big Yale-Harvard game next Saturday. He can't buy one for love. That's sure! There is comfort in the fact that sometimes it is better to be a poor Harvard graduate and see the Yale game than to be a plutocratic one and be barred out.

More than 2,000 Harvard men are in the same class with Mr. Morgan, which may be something of a comfort to them. Also, there were more than 25,000 applications for seats from Harvard men, but the Crimson allotment was only 23,000, leaving 17,000 to the Yale management.

Mr. Morgan got stung on his application because he did not sign his request "for personal use." Without one of these magic words there is nothing doing for anybody in the way of seats for the greatest game of all the Harvard calendar. Mr. Morgan got seats for all the other big games at the Stadium this Fall, and he got good ones, too. Next year he will remember to sign his application the way it should be signed or else, perish the thought, stop trying to play him and get seats for some friend.

The allotment of tickets this year is a puzzle to many Harvard men, for the students and those who should be favored in the allotment, are all crowded seats near the dropping off place, and many of them are visiting the office of the Harvard Athletic Association with all kinds of profane fire in their eye. The distribution is by drawing entirely, however, and the H. A. A. says there is no favoritism except in the case of the team, where it should rightly exist.

Contrary to the custom in vogue several years ago, the H. A. A. is not sending out a diagram of the Stadium this year, so that many of those persons who have drawn seats have no idea where they are.

ITALIANS PLAN FOR LONG TRIPOLI SIEGE

TRIPOLI, Nov. 21.—The Italian army, cooped up in Tripoli, is making preparations for a long siege. Sappers have been put to work digging wells to replace the water supply which the besieging army of Turks and Arabs cut off. More than 100 wells have already been dug, and others are being sunk. The cholera situation is losing its serious aspect, and the number of new cases is decreasing.

OLYMPIC BLAMED FOR SEA COLLISION

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Blame for the collision between the liner Olympic and the British cruiser Hawke, in the Solent on September 20, was put wholly upon the officers of the White Star steamship in the Court of Admiralty to-day by Commander Blunt of the cruiser, when he took the stand in suits growing out of the disaster. Evidence for the marine company having been concluded, the government opened its case to-day. Commander Blunt swore that he was on the bridge with his other officers when the Olympic appeared. Only two men on the Hawke were in no way responsible.

DOMINICANS CHECK REVOLUTION PLOT

SANTA DOMINGO, Nov. 21.—The Cabinet to-day assumed control of affairs in the Dominican republic following the assassination of President Caceres and immediately took steps to prevent an uprising in favor of Jiminez. Arrests of prominent leaders in the successful plot against President Caceres' life, Congress has been called to meet in extraordinary session on November 30, when it will probably elect General Vasquez president. General Tejera, who was in the assassin's line of fire, died to-day of the presidential bodyguard.

WHITE HOUSE SEASON TO BEGIN DEC. 14

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The social season at the White House will open with a dinner to the Cabinet on December 14. The New Year's reception comes next, and that will be followed by the diplomatic reception, January 9; the diplomatic dinner, on January 16; the Cabinet reception on January 23; the Supreme Court dinner of January 30; the Congressional reception on February 6, and the Speaker's reception on February 13. The official season will close with the reception to the Army and Navy on February 20.

WHAT IS YOUR RECIPE FOR BEST BROWN BREAD?

You can make brown bread, Mrs. New England Housewife, can't you? But what is the real old-fashioned New England variety—the kind that mother used to make—the kind that has been served in New England homes on Saturday night for years and years?

Heretofore New England women have sat back contentedly in the belief that brown bread they made was the real article.

That is, until Mrs. John Delmar of St. Louis, Mo., came to Boston. She had heard a great deal about New England brown bread and baked beans and wished to bring back with her an official recipe for each.

Baked bean recipes she got from her friends. Mrs. Delmar found, varied but little. But brown bread—the recipes her friends gave her were essentially different that she was puzzled what to bring back as the official New England recipe.

Help Mrs. Delmar.

So Mrs. Delmar appealed to the AMERICAN to aid her to obtain a recipe for making real New England brown bread. The AMERICAN to help her out of her dilemma has offered $10 in prizes. The AMERICAN wants the real, official recipe for brown bread. And this will be determined from the thousands submitted by competent, impartial judges.

So send along your brown bread recipe, Mrs. New England Housewife. May be your recipe is the best. Here is a fine chance to aid Mrs. Delmar and at the same time be well repaid for your trouble.

The AMERICAN offers a prize of $5 for the best recipe for brown bread sent in by a New England woman housewife. Five additional prizes of $1 each will be given for the five next best recipes.

Send your recipe for brown bread to the Brown Bread Editor, Boston AMERICAN, No. 39 Summer street, Boston. Send it AT ONCE.

Here are a few of the thousands of recipes received up to date:

Just a Few Recipes.

One tea cup of corn meal, two tea cups of graham flour, one tea cup of wheat flour, one coffee cup of molasses, one teaspoonful soda, one teaspoonful of salt, one cup of raisins. Mix all together with sour milk until the mixture is a little thicker than if you were mixing for cake. Pour into moulds, buttered, and allow to steam three hours, being careful that the water is kept boiling all the time. The moulds should be kept covered tightly.

Dorchester. MRS. T. ARMSTRONG.

One and one-half cups of Indian meal, 2 cup of rye meal, ½ cup of flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon soda.

One and one-half cups of molasses and 2 full cups of cold water. Stir well and steam three hours.

East Bridgewater. MRS. JOHN BLACKWELL.

One heaping coffee cup of each, rye, corn and graham meal, one cup sweet skimmed or sour milk, one teaspoon soda dissolved in a little of cold water put on and boil 1 hour, then put in oven and bake 1 hour.

It may appear to be too thin, but it is not, as this receipt will never be found to fail. Serve warm with beans. Give the receipt to your cook. Take care it does not boil entirely away or stop boiling. To prevent the latter, add a little hot water a few moments into the open oven to dry the top. It will then come out in perfect shape.

This bread can be used as a pudding and served with a sauce made of thick sour cream, well sweetened and seasoned with nutmeg, or it is good toasted the next day.

No. 376 Washington street. MRS. ANNIE NISBET.

One cup flour (white, graham or rye), 1½ cups corn meal, 2-3 cup molasses, 2 cups sweet milk, 2 teaspoons soda, salt; cook two hours. It will be very thin but do not put any more flour in it.

MRS. KATHERINE KISER.

No. 25 Cliff street, Roxbury.

One egg, 1 cup sour milk, ½ cup sugar, ½ molasses, 1 cup graham flour, 1 cup wheat flour, ½ cup corn meal, 1 tablespoon shortening, 1 teaspoonful soda, 1 teaspoon salt. Bake in moderate oven like bread. MRS. HJALMAR OLSON.

No. 114 Chelsea street, Charlestown.

The following is my recipe for brown bread: Two cups rye meal, two cups granulated Indian meal, one cup molasses, one egg, one and one-half pints of sweet milk and one teaspoonful salt. Add soda to dry ingredients and sift; add egg, well beaten, to the milk; add molasses and stir well and steam three hours.

No. 9 South street, Nashua, N. H.

One cup of white flour, two cups of graham flour, two cups of Indian meal, one teaspoonful of soda, one cup of molasses, three and one-half cups of milk, a little salt.

Beat well and steam for four hours. This is for sour milk. When sweet milk is used, use baking powder. This is improved by setting it into the oven fifteen minutes after it is slipped from the mould. To be eaten warm with butter.

GRACE V. CORCORAN.

No. 69 Austin street.

One and one half cups graham flour, ½ cup wheat flour, ½ cup corn meal, ½ cup molasses, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 2-3 cups sweet milk.

Dissolve soda in milk. Mix dry ingredients and sift. Add molasses and milk. Stir until well mixed. Turn into buttered mold and steam two hours.

MRS. CHARLOTTE BRYCE.

No. 38 Day street, Fitchburg.

PRIMARY WAR IN WORCESTER

WORCESTER, Nov. 21.—The Republican city primaries are being held to-day and the contest for the mayoralty nomination between Alderman George F. Brooks and Colonel William A. Lytle will, all early indications point, bring out a record vote. The polls will be open during the afternoon and evening.

Both candidates have waged a hard, long campaign. Thousands of circulars have been sent through the mails urging the voters to support one or another of the aspirants. Attempts have been made to line up the churches, the labor organizations, the secret societies and every agency and influence in the city, and in this respect old-time politicians say the present primary campaign has been waged more fiercely than any other the city has ever known. The Merchants' Association has also taken a hand in the fight and is backing Colonel Lytle.

Both candidates have been in the public eye for many years and each is favorably known in Worcester. Colonel Lytle served two years in the executive council and was appointed chairman of the delegation that represented Massachusetts at the Lewis-Clark exposition at Portland, Oregon. He has also held many municipal offices and has been president of the Worcester Board of Trade. He is the present commander of the Worcester Continentals and a well-known lawyer.

Alderman Brooks was a member of the school committee for fourteen years and for six years a member of the Board of Aldermen, of which he is now president. He has served on all important committees of both bodies.

David T. O'Connell won the Democratic mayoralty nomination at the primaries on that party on Monday. He received a plurality of 522 votes over Dr. Thomas J. Harrett. The primaries were the most largely attended ever held by the party in the city, there having been 6,849 votes cast. The only other contest was for councilman from Ward 3, where Daniel Comerford won with fifty-four votes to spare over two competitors.

WOMEN IN TAR PLOT MAY TELL

LINCOLN CENTRE, Kas., Nov. 21.—If a half dozen or more of the most prominent citizens of Shady Bend go to prison for tarring Miss Mary Chamberlain, the young school teacher, the wives, sisters and sweethearts of these men must assume the blame. While it is known that the plot to drive Miss Chamberlain out of Shady Bend was conceived by a number of women of the village and this has been hinted at in the evidence, the defendants are making desperate efforts to keep the names of the women plotters out of the trial.

The four men who have confessed to being members of the "tar" party did so, it is now said, rather than have their wives names dragged into the affair. The wife of one confessed member of the "tar" party has threatened to tell her part in the affair and if she does the trial may be filled with many new sensations.

Miss Chamberlain came to Shady Bend to clerk in a store after her school at Beverly had closed. Her appearance as clerk at the store of L. V. Green immediately caused a noticeable increase in the number of male customers.

One of these was at the store so much that his wife became jealous. She aroused the jealousy of other married women and at "mother meetings" a few days later the plan to have the pretty school teacher tarred and feathered was conceived.

Ed Elcord, village barber, the decoy who led Miss Chamberlain to the tar party, resumed the stand this morning. He gave a graphic detail of how the men covered Miss Chamberlain with tar.

TO WED IF THEY CAN ELUDE CHILDREN

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 21.—Wilhelm Hengemuhle, sixty-four years old, and Mrs. Catherine Meyer, sixty, widower and widow, will marry if they can elude their children and grandchildren. The couple courted in Germany fifty years ago, but parted. Hengemuhle married and his wife died. His old sweetheart married and death also robbed her of her husband. The couple met again in Baltimore, where both families had settled, and the courtship was renewed. Hengemuhle got a marriage license Saturday but it raised such a storm among the children and grandchildren that he postponed the ceremony, awaiting a more favorable opportunity.

ONE DEAD, MANY INJURED, IN WRECK

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 21.—One man was killed, four badly hurt and others slightly injured at 5:30 p. m. to-day when the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg passenger train leaving Syracuse at 5:15 o'clock was in collision with a freight. Nicholas Snyder, freight conductor, of this city, was killed. Fireman Earl Hettler of this city was jammed under the engine, and his condition is serious.

Mrs. Patterson to Tell Tragedy Story to Jury

MRS. GERTRUDE PATTERSON

Three poses of Mrs. Patterson, on trial at Denver, Col., charged with the murder of her husband.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH KILLING HUSBAND TO BE WITNESS IN OWN DEFENCE.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Gertrude Gibson Patterson, on trial here in the criminal division of the West side District Court, charged with killing her husband, Charles A. Patterson, will take the witness stand in her own behalf, she announced to-day.

The beautiful defendant looked supremely confident when the work of filling the jury box was resumed to-day.

"When I go on the stand in my behalf I will prove that my dead husband, Charles Patterson, was a miserable white slaver, and that he would brag to his friends that he had a fifth man on his staff who was furnishing him money," declared Mrs. Patterson. "I will have a man here who knew Patterson in Chicago. He will testify that after Patterson would come to me and get money from me, money which I obtained from Stresos, he would take it down to his friend and shake it in his face and say: 'What do you want to work for? I have got a rich man on my staff.' That is the kind of a man Patterson was. He was the lowest kind of a white slaver, and this I will prove."

Mrs. Patterson, who formerly lived in Chicago, shot her husband twice in the back with a revolver at Montclair, a suburb of Denver, last Summer, while keeping an engagement to go motoring with him.

Equal Suffrage, Equal Hanging.

The case so far has brought out the fact that business men of Denver are willing to vote, as jurors, for the hanging of a woman, if her crime should deserve the extreme penalty.

They so declared to-day at the trial of Mrs. Patterson. So general was the declaration by prospective jurors that they would act in the case of a woman exactly as they would in the case of a man under the same circumstances that both prosecution and defence were surprised and the probability that a jury would be finally sworn in before the day was over was brighter.

"Well, we let women vote out here," is the way one man put it. "They are our equals in most every thing, they say. They ought to be our equals when it comes to hanging," the talesman concluded in rather gruff tones.

Mrs. Patterson put her hands over her face and sobbed.

"What has become of the chivalry of the West?" someone whispered, so loud that it could be heard throughout the courtroom.

"Woman suffrage," the woman whisperer's male companion replied, before the bailiff could rap for order.

The whole courtroom was stirred by this strange incident.

Man after man declared that he believed that man and woman should be equal before the law, and nearly all those who said they had no conscientious scruples against capital punishment added that they would, if chosen jurors in a murder case, vote as readily to hang a woman as for the hanging of a man, if the evidence should justify the death penalty.

Attorney Hilton, for the defence, suggested that he may plead temporary insanity in behalf of his client. In questioning a talesman he asked if the latter would consider proof of insanity as a proof that the killing was done in self-defence.

May Plead Insanity.

Hilton went no further along that line of inquiry, but his question was taken to indicate that he may, in order to lay the foundation for the introduction of evidence of Patterson's cruelty and concerning her life, offer for her a plea that she was insane at the time of the homicide as a result of Patterson's treatment.

In the trial, attorneys for the defence say there will be unfolded the story of a sixteen-year-old girl whose beauty attracted the attention of a Chicago millionaire, Emil W. Stresos, who, declaring his intention to wed her, sent her to Paris to be educated and five months later brought her back to Chicago where under renewed promises of marriage they lived five years during which they were thought by the family and friends of both to be man and wife.

How the millionaire, finally tiring of the girl, arranged with Charles A. Patterson, a young Chicago broker, that she should become Patterson's wife, for which, Mrs. Patterson declares, she afterward learned that her husband had received $15,000, will be told, her attorneys say. The unhappiness of her married life tainted at the outset by this discovery and marked from the beginning, she says, with repeated attempts to force her to wring money from her former admirer will be related.

A VALUABLE SUGGESTION
IMPORTANT TO EVERYONE

It is now conceded by physicians that the kidneys should have more attention as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poisons and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood.

During the winter months especially, when we live an indoor life, the kidneys should receive some assistance when needed, as we take less exercise, drink less water and often eat more rich, heavy food, thereby forcing the kidneys to do more work than Nature intended. Evidence of kidney trouble, such as lame back, inability to hold urine, smarting or burning, brick-dust or sediment, sallow complexion, rheumatism, may be weak or irregular heart action, warns you that your kidneys require help immediately to avoid more serious trouble.

An herbal medicine containing no minerals or opiates has the most healing influence. An ideal herbal compound that has had most remarkable success as a kidney and bladder remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention the Boston Daily American.

MADERO RUSHES 25,000 TROOPS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21.—The movement of 25,000 troops northward from the capital to guard the northern states against General Bernardo Reyes's insurrecto forces began to-day. They will be scattered along the Rio Grande in the states of Chihuahua, Coahuila, Nuevo Leon and Tamaulipas. They are accompanied by two batteries of mountain artillery of four guns each and four batteries of machine guns of two guns each.

The entire northern zone will be placed under command of General Orozco, one of President Madero's ablest officers in the revolution, which overthrew Diaz. General Trevino will be second in command. The Rurales will for a time act independently of the federal army.

That President Madero is determined to employ the methods of his stern predecessor, President Diaz, and crush out rebellion with the mailed fist, was made evident to-day by the widespread activities which he set in motion and also by a proclamation which he issued warning the insurrecto leaders chiefly and acting upon all good citizens to remain loyal to the government.

There was an exodus to-day of American tourists who have been here attending the races. A special train left over the national railway bearing many of them. Secret agents of Madero along the Texas border declare that the Reyistas and Maderistas have joined forces and that they are from 200 to 350 strong in every border town, including El Paso, Douglas, Eagle Pass and Laredo. Several consuls were suspected and the El Paso consul was permitted to resign Saturday under charges that he encouraged the Reyistas.

Madero is now facing actual rebellion in Morelos, Guerrero and Puebla, with a border also to guard against invasion from the lawless forces of the present rule and look for ultimate American intervention.

PACK OF MASTIFFS USED BY RAINEY IN BIG LION HUNT

JOHANNESBURG, Nov. 21.—Paul Rainey of New York has arrived here from a six months' trip in the interior of Africa. He reports having made some big killings. One day he bagged twenty-six lions. Contrary to the predictions of the most experienced of the African big game hunters, Rainey achieved his greatest success by the use of a pack of half-bred mastiffs, which faced the lions fearlessly.

ATWOOD TO FLY OVER STADIUM

Harry N. Atwood, the aviator, intends to duplicate the feat he performed at the Harvard Yale boat race on the Thames, by flying over the Stadium while the Harvard and Yale football game is in progress. He has been unable to secure tickets for the game and in order not to miss the fun has decided to watch the contest from the clouds. As an added feature of his performance, Atwood will dip down near one of the box offices and leave the price of his admission.

Atwood determined upon this course after exhausting every means of procuring tickets.

"I know what I will do," he said. "I will just wheel out that biplane of mine and fly over the field and see the game. They may try to get an injunction against me to restrain me from doing so, but just the same I am going to see that game.

"Are you serious?" Atwood was asked.

"You just watch me next Saturday and see whether I am or not," answered the aviator; "and in order not to cheat them out of any money, I will slip down and drop the price of a ticket at the box office, or as near to it as I am able."

Atwood is in touch between flights making preparations for resuming the office and duties of chief instructor at an aviation school, to be opened here. He has arranged his connection with the Burgess Company and Curtis.

Early in the Spring Atwood intends flying across Behring Strait. This feat, if accomplished, would make him the first man to fly from the Western to the Eastern Hemisphere.

OPEN PRIMARIES IN SOMERVILLE

The joint city primaries opened in Somerville to-day with the interest centred about the contests waged by two rival candidates for aldermanic nominations. It was a foregone conclusion the Mayor Charles A. Burns would be renominated by the Republicans and Charles to Sibes, president of the Democratic Ey Committee, by the Democrats.

The primaries opened with quiet for the Lieutenants of the various deserving candidates were out early. Thirteen of the present twenty-one Aldermen are classified for renomination. The board at present consists of nineteen republicans and two Democrats, but the attitude of the Democrats indicates the expect to increase their number to five the coming election.

There is much interest in a fight for the Democratic aldermanic nination in Ward 2, the only Democratic ward in the city. Robert C. Harris opposed Russell and Tenney, the present Democratic aldermen from that ward, who are seing to be returned to the board. Most clarete campaign is directed against iseell, who is serving his second term.

One of the closest contests years took place in Ward 6, where the are four Republican aspirants for three places on the board. Alderman Orr G. Sargent, who is serving his first n, seeks to be returned to office. He opposed by Clifford C. Powell, David H. Hton and Fred W. Jackson.

TOWNS JOIN IN MAINE MAN HUNT

MACHIAS, Me., Nov. 21.—Augmented by hundreds of fresh volunteers from surrounding towns, the searching party which has been scouring the woods for miles in efforts to locate Willey L. Peterson, who disappeared last week, resumed their search to-day. It is now feared that Peterson committed suicide by throwing himself into the river. A younger daughter of the missing man, who strayed away from the party Monday, was found to-day in the woods, where she had spent the night.

NORTH ADAMS, Nov.2.—The youngest hunter in Massachusetts to shoot a deer on the first day the open season is believed to have belonged Carbis of Hoosac Tunnel, aged ten years. He went out with his father enthusiastic hunter, and before o'clock had shot a 200-pound deer.

VAUGHAN TELLS OF LONDON POOR

Rev. Father Bernard Vaughan of London, at the monthly meeting of the Charitable Irish Society in the auditorium of the Boston City Club, told of his inborn sympathy for poor of the East Side of England's metropolis and of the terrible conditions he found there. He emphasized the need of being "good" with the poor.

"I was called to London from the North of England," he said, "and found myself at the Hub of the empire, living in fashionable Mayfair, where there is idleness, frivolity, wickedness, fashion — where everything is artistic, finished, polished and refined. Everything but God is in it. But people so refined do not dream of positively anything against God—they never mention His name.

"So I went to my brother, who was Cardinal of Westminster at the time, and I said to him: 'Give me a job among the poorest of the poor.'

"'Go then to Commercial road in the East End,' said he, and there I went, there 12,000 of the very poorest in my diocese, and nearly all of them are from Ireland. I've been weary with my work in the West End, but no man can go into the East End, with God's assistance, without being moved up. It is a pleasure to go down to that poisoned atmosphere to get a spiritual sea breeze.

"Let me tell you how they live there. There are 3,000 of them living eight and more in a room, 5,000 living seven or more in a room, 20,000 living six or more in a room. We are told that twenty-five persons is sufficient for an acre in the West End, but in Commercial road there are 220 to the acre, and close by there are 3,000 acres—and will not any living, but existing here.

"Think of these conditions! Think of the trades of these people. Of the 400 trades classified in London the people do nothing less than one clothing a day, and in 174 less than one clothing and no person! How can such live—on such wages! Yet they are happy, many of them. I asked one who looked most fairly happy one day how he did it. I said: 'Jack, how do you manage to look so fair?' And he said:

"'I shiny my back one week for my stomach, and my stomach one week for my back.'

"But I assure you these people are lovable and gentlemen."

The monk told some pathetic stories which told of the charities and pride of some of these people—even the children—and he told of the Knights of Columbus, which he said "belongs to me and God Almighty. My boys can use their father. I give them a talk on Friday. That is a great day for all of us. I give them a sort of contemporary talk. You see I put with them. I do not patronize them. The poor don't like being patronized. They like being palled."

He told of his nightly rounds through the dark streets in his private carousals, holding a large crucifix and with some of the children singing hymns, and the singing and preaching which followed in some alley, with the crucifix in plain view, heated by means of torches carried by the children.

$29,000 PAID FOR OLD BIBLE

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The Huth copy of the Gutenberg Bible sold at Sotheby's here brought $29,000, or just $21,000 less than was paid by Henry E. Huntington for the Hoe copy in New York last Winter. Bernard Quaritch was the successful bidder. As it was Joseph Widener, the son of P. A. B. Widener of Philadelphia, who forced Mr. Huntington to pay that enormous figure at the Hoe sale, it is rumored that Quaritch in this instance acted as his agent.

There are now in America two copies of this famous book, the first printed from movable type, one in the library of J. P. Morgan and the other in that of Henry E. Huntington.

The Huth copy bears a note on the cover inscribed by Bernard Quaritch to the effect that "This is the finest copy I ever beheld or handled."

The Gutenberg Bible, or the "forty-two lines Bible," is commonly known as the Mazarine Bible," from the fact that the copy in the Mazarine Library was first recognized as a Bible to be specially distinguished as the work of Gutenberg.

Following in the order of the sale Quaritch got $15,200 for the first edition of the Bible with a date which was printed in vellum in double columns of forty-eight lines each in 1462.

The 158 numbers of the catalogue offered to-day brought $85,039. Quaritch again successfully outbid the majority of his competitors.

BERNHARDT TO WED ACTOR, 26

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Mme. Sarah Bernhardt is to marry Lou Tellegen, a Flemish actor, twenty-six years old, according to the Paris correspondent of the London Standard. Tellegen was a subordinate member of her company during her tour in America last year.

Mme. Bernhardt, who is in the sixty-seventh year of her perpetual youth, has long been a widow and was only a short time wedded. In 1882 she married Jacques Damala, a Greek actor in her company, in London, but very soon divorced him. Damala died in 1890.

The actress is already a great grandmother and blessed with a number of grandchildren. Two years ago, Mlle. Simone Maurice-Bernhardt, the daughter of her son Maurice, was married to Edgar Gro of Paris.

CASCARETS INSURE INSIDE CLEANLINESS

The Millions of Cascaret Users Never Have Headache, Constipation, Biliousness or Sick Stomach.

It is more necessary that you keep your Bowels, Liver and Stomach clean, pure and fresh than it is to keep the sewers and drainage of a large city free from obstruction.

Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels.

No odds how badly and upset you feel, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't let the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

HOODLUMS ATTACK BROCKTON HIGH TEAM

TAUNTON, Nov. 21.—Disgraceful scenes marked the close of the football game here between Taunton High and Brockton High, which the home team won, 8 to 3. After losing the game on a decision said to be questionable the Brockton players and rooters were ready to start for Brockton when a crowd of local hoodlums set and throwing mud at the players and rooters. Headmaster Whitcomb of the Brockton High School had his eyeglasses broken by a flying stone. Manager Getchell and Coach Hudgens were assaulted, as were other members of the Brockton party. Athletic relations between the two schools have been severed.

WOMEN FORCE ASQUITH'S HAND

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Premier Asquith said in the House of Commons that if a woman suffrage amendment to the manhood suffrage bill should be carried by the House of Commons the government would accept full responsibility for the measure if its amended form.

The statement was forced from the Premier by events of the last few days, although it is regarded more in the nature of a warning than of any sign of weakening on his part.

The Suffragettes are preparing to renew their attacks on Parliament with a battle to-night which will surpass all previous campaigns.

They have summoned all their followers and male sympathizers to assemble around the Parliament building at 8 o'clock. The fact that the gathering is held in the dark may make unusual trouble for the police. Mrs. Pothick Lawrence explains it that:

"The gathering has been arranged late for the express reason that the decent, honest workingman will be in the streets. We have found that their presence affords women moral protection against violence by the police and hooligans."

Miss Christabel Pankhurst said that this time the women certainly will push their way to the floor of the House of Commons to make their protest against "the great insult Mr. Asquith has given."

BEATTIE TURNS TO PRAYER BOOK

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 21.—It looks as though Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., convicted of wife murder and awaiting death in the electric chair Friday, had decided to go to his death without a public confession, even though such an admission of guilt might bring him thirty more days of life.

It was learned to-day he has turned with apparent sincerity to religion as a consolation. Since the day which his father was a dozen before the slaying of young Mrs. Beattie completed in his cell, and the novels and magazines which he has been reading for days have been the larger portion of his waking hours to the perusal of prayer books and the scriptures.

Also he has knelt in prayer for several hours each day. He has visited by the Rev. J. J. Fix, pastor of the Manchester Presbyterian Church, which his father was a deacon before the slaying of young Mrs. Beattie completed in his cell, and the Rev. Benjamin Dennis of Richmond.

Will Not Confess.

The Rev. Mr. Dennis said: "What this prisoner has said to me is, of course, a matter of serious confidence, which I could not reveal under any circumstances, but I am willing to say that he has prayed with Mr. Fix and with me, and that I believe that he is truly humbling himself—that he has sincerely accepted the consolation of religion."

From this statement, and from the fact that the young man found plenty of time to say his wife for love of a younger and prettier girl (Beatrice Hilburn), has ordered away his frivolous instruments of amusement, it is safe to say that he expects to go to the electric chair Friday—and go without confession.

Yesterday—this came from most authentic sources—it was said he desired over a momentous problem placed before him unofficially by the State of Virginia: that he might have a reprieve of thirty days in return for a full confession.

But now it would appear he has decided not to consider further this offer, and to go to his death just as nervily as he went through his trial and thereby leave, perhaps, in the mind of his aged and loving mother a bone of his innocence that may last as long as the old home does.

Death Chair Only Twenty Feet Away.

He is only twenty feet removed from the death chair. Beattie, when the sheriff calls on him to read the death warrant and he to follow him to the chair where he is to be killed, will not have to take more than forty steps before he will find himself seated in the modern "Ironed Maiden," the all-embracing arms and straps and metal cap of the twentieth-century death-dealing apparatus.

It will come in on a chamber totally in darkness save as a single light shines above each arm of the death chair. Directly behind the chair will stand the electrician with his hand on the switch. But owing to the arrangement of lighting Beattie, even if he should turn deliberately or sharply, would not be able to place his glance on his executioner.

The execution chamber being twenty-five feet by twelve feet in dimensions. The twelve witnesses (all that are permitted by the law of Virginia) will be practically hidden from the condemned man. They will sit in a far corner of the room, on camp stools, four abreast.

ALAN DALE SAYS GABY IS A "CUTE" PERFORMER

Parisienne star takes readily to American style of dancing in Winter Garden show, "Vera Violette," in New York.

By ALAN DALE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Little Miss Gabrielle-of-the-Lilies, inhaling the buoyant atmosphere of U. S. A., discarding ropes of pearls, kings and "effete monarchies," got down to real American work last night, and at the Winter Garden appeared at the head of a star cast in a new musical entertainment called "Vera Violetta."

Players of a foolish game called bridge usually ask their partners: "Do you discard from strength or weakness?" Gaby, in the new foolish game of starring, apparently discarded from both. Most expensive people were placed in juxtaposition with her in the new proposition, and Gaby was comparatively Americanized for the first time in her Parisian life. Let me say at once that, all stupid sensationalism having been shoved off, Gabrielle-of-the-Lilies played the game on her merits.

It Was Gaby Oeslys.

"Vera Violetta," adapted from the German of Leo Stein or a couple of "never-mind-whoms," and music by Edmund Eysler, and a plot. And a plot! It had songs and it had dances. It had dialogue and it had stage management. It was Gaby Deslys and others, plenty of large, costly others. It was, of course, mainly directed at the Tired Business Man, who can go to the Winter Garden in perfect confidence that he is going to get his money's worth.

Gabrielle-of-the-Lilies wore three corsage gowns, one perpetually bright suffe and some sets of Gargantuan headgear. She was awfully cute. Her gowns displayed her very Bassons proportions; her smile revealed her affable nature, and her headgear encircled her peroxide tresses. One of the gowns was rather suggestive of gold, which is always flatteering; another was white, a third was black.

It was in her dances that Gaby came out best. In a song called "Come and Dance," with Harry Pilcer, Miss-of-the-Lilies came as near to a clog as a French lassie could. Having discarded the French dancer who was lugged in for the dance when she first arrived, she adopted Mr. Pilcer, and I hasten to say that he took good care of her. Gabay is no Pavlova, but she certainly was nimble and skittish.

Readily Takes to Dancing.

She made Mr. Pilcer work for his living. Youth could labor no more arduously. Miss Deslys took to the American "style" as a duck takes to water, and please realize that this was a difficult task. American dancing is not easy for foreigners. Gaby did a whole lot of dancing. It having been discovered that this is her long suit.

In one very elaborate number, with mounds of elusive people, she leaned upon chairs, and was finally carried off. In a very elevated way, by these hard-working accessories. Perhaps in her black dress she looked her best. It was very short, and it declined to stay down, as well-regulated dresses should do, but—magnanimously we forgave it. At the Winter Garden one can be quite magnanimous.

PRACTICE FOR BIG AUTO RACE

By J. C. KERRISON.

Official practice on the course at Savannah was inaugurated yesterday, the light cars entered for the Savannah Challenge and the Vanderbilt Cup entrants had the use of the course from noon until 5:00 p. m. Quite a number of the cars were out, but no effort was made to speed, the operators being content to take the course at a reasonable pace in order to become familiar with the new banks and curves.

This year the committee has passed a rule forbidding operators to ferry women over the course in their cars, and during the next week or two we expect to hear particularly speedy work on the course.

Harney Oldfield is now in Savannah again, or his press agent does, saying the time honored story that he may drive a big car in the Vanderbilt race. He has been offered a certain foreign car for both the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize, and he says he will accept the offer if he can become reinstated by the American Automobile Association. Inasmuch as the contest board has refused him all financial assistance, Barney and Bill Dickens's application for reinstatement is said to be before the board at the present time. Oldfield might have a chance, but I won't be sure until after the Savannah contests have been driven.

Everything else pertaining to racing will be closed and the drivers will draw for positions in the contest.

Plans have been perfected for the twelfth annual National Automobile show to be held in January in the Grand Central Palace, New York, and work on the preliminary details is progressing rapidly. More than seventy manufacturers of complete vehicles have contracted for space to display their newest models for the coming year. Half of the number are builders of motor delivery wagons and trucks, many of which are new to the general public. Twenty different makes of these worm machines never have been exhibited at any national automobile show. This branch of the motor car business is growing so fast that new companies are being organized every week to manufacture commercial and industrial vehicles.

LAWSON AGAIN HEADS FARMERS

MARSHFIELD, Nov. 21.—Thomas W. Lawson was re-elected president of the Marshfield Agricultural and Horticultural Society at the annual meeting. President Lawson was unable to attend, but responded and offered to lend the society $5,000 at 4 per cent. for as long as it was desired.

The society for several years has not had nearly enough accommodation in the way of horse barns, grandstand and other buildings on the grounds for use of the exhibitors and were considering the hiring of that amount of money. President Lawson urged the society to continue the horse show features of the annual fair as it was increasing every year in popularity, the directors will take the matter under advisement and will probably accept President Lawson's offer.

The officers elected were Thomas W. Lawson of Egypt, president; Albert T. Sprague of Marshfield, vice president; Israel H. Bates of North Marshfield, secretary; M. Herron Keat of Marshfield, treasurer; Harlow Sprague, Charles F. Church, Edward E. Ames, Elijah Ames, David L. Strange, Henry Carver, Morris Baker and Walter F. Damon of Marshfield Hills; Horatio Chandler, Albert M. Goulding of Duxbury, Fred Cole of Scituate, Arthur Sprague and Ernest L. Sparrow of Norwell, George V. Zenetello of North Scituate, Alfred L. Lincoln of Hingham, Joseph J. Shepard of Pembroke, Daniel F. Howard of Brockton, Albert T. Sprague, Jr., of Revere, directors.

Wm. H. Spence of Kingston was chosen delegate to the State Board of Agriculture for three years.

Physicians Praise Consumption Remedy

Most Eminent Throughout Europe Endorse Preparation Brought to America.

During the last year there has been introduced into the United States a remedy for Consumption, which comes to us with a most remarkable list of endorsements from the Leading Specialists of Europe.

It has been used for several years on the other side, and case after case has yielded to it.

This preparation is called Sirolin, and judging from the condition of some of the patients whom it has saved, no consumptive need fear that he is too far gone to be benefited by it.

Sirolin builds up the body by increasing the appetite and assisting the digestion. It checks the racking cough, and lessens the gathering of mucus on the lungs in a remarkable way.

If you, or any of your friends, are suffering from any throat or lung ailment, do not fail to send for full information about Sirolin from the Sirolin Company, 228 West Broadway, New York City.

All leading druggists are recommending and distributing Sirolin with considerable success.

The EVENING AMERICAN guarantees to advertisers the largest circulation by far of any daily newspaper, and over 300,000 more than the next highest evening paper, and over 100,000 more than all the other Boston evening papers combined. Circulation books open to all.

OLDEST HOTEL MAN REACHES 90 YEARS

Philip Yesten, supposed to be the oldest hotel man in America, celebrated his nineteenth birthday by greeting many of his old-time friends at the No. 40 Washington street, and afterward walked downtown. Mr. Yesten retired from active business five years ago, at which time he was managing the Lake Pleasant House in Greenfield. During the fifty-five years he was in the business he had had charge of the Pacific House in Lawrence, the Rollinson on Washington street, the Great Head in Hamilton, the Westgate Villa at Newport, and the Ocean House at Hampton Beach. In his time he has had as guests many distinguished men, including Horace Greeley, Governor John A. Andrew, Charles Sumner, Governor Nathaniel Banks and others.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR TICKETS FOR OPERA

If the demand for tickets for the first week's performances of the Boston Opera House at the opening of the single ticket sale be taken as an augury, the Boston Opera Company will experience the most prosperous season in its existence. From the hour that the box office was opened until the close there was a steady stream of purchasers, while every mail brought stacks of letters containing money orders and checks for seats. The management wishes to call the attention of that part of the public who find it inconvenient to come for their tickets to the Opera House that there is a down town ticket office at No. 177 Tremont street.

BOSTON BANKERS AT NATIONAL MEETING

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21.—The thirty-seventh annual convention of the American Bankers' Association opened here today with delegates from all parts of the country in attendance. More than 125 bankers from New England and Massachusetts, who came in a special train, were met by a reception committee when they stepped from the train at the Union station.

The Bostonians were taken in charge here by the special reception committee and escorted to the St. Charles Hotel. To-day many of the party visited the historic old French Market and the French quarter of the city.

CHINESE SAY ROYAL MOTHER HAS ELOPED

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—Princess Lai, mother of the baby Emperor of China, and wife of the Prince Regent, has eloped with an actor, Ying Shu Ko, according to Chinese newspapers. The mother of the Emperor, one paper says, fell in love with the actor and corresponded with him for some time before the rebellion began. The Princess is said to have taken a fortune in jewels with her and to be living with Ying in Mukden.

The Big Hilton Broadway Stock

Now Being Closed Out At Tremendous Reductions

Everything that was made up for our new store in the Broadway Theatre Building, at corner Broadway and 41st Street, New York, is now being sold in our Boston and other stores regardless of cost or value.

This latest acquisition to our chain of stores, which we planned to open this month, will will not be ready for business until early Spring, owing to the difficulty found in removing the stone pillar for our corner windows.

All the goods made for this store was left on our hands on this account, and the only course left was to distribute it among our eight stores, institute a speedy clearance sale at sharp reductions, and in this manner get back a part of the many dollars that we will lose through this unfortunate circumstance.

This is how we have repriced this Broadway stock:

$18 Suits and Overcoats	(Broadway Stock)	$12.50
$20 Suits and Overcoats	(Broadway Stock)	$15.00
$25 Suits and Overcoats	(Broadway Stock)	$18.00

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. More than forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood-purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run-down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone root and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine.

Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Coe, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich, pure blood and so invigorates and regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and through them, the whole system. Thus all skin affections, blotches, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed.

In treating old running sores, or ulcers, it is well to insure their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. If your druggist don't happen to have this Salve in stock, send fifty cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a large box of the "All-Healing Salve" will reach you by return post.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Though he offers the substitute for a less price you can't afford to experiment with your health. Go where they give you what you ask for without argument.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

INDIAN THORPE IS A REAL CHAMPION IN ATHLETIC CIRCLES

Indian Thorpe, in a Few of the Many Athletic Stunts He Has Mastered

MANDOT DRAWS WITH BALDWIN

MEMPHIS, Nov. 21.—Matty Baldwin, the Boston lightweight, fought eight fast rounds to a draw with Joe Mandot, the Southern aspirant for the lightweight championship, before the Southern Athletic Club. The bout was one of the fastest ever seen in this city and the referee's decision was a just one.

The first half of the fight was Mandot's although he did not have a commanding lead over the Boston fighter. In the first round Baldwin opened with a fusilade of rights and lefts that had the Southerner completely baffled. It looked for a few minutes as if Mandot was to be clearly outclassed.

Baldwin soon tired, however, and for the next five rounds had the advantage of the infighting. In the seventh and eighth rounds Matty came back strong and landed many terrific blows, staggering the Southerner to his knees with a right to the jaw in the seventh and repeating twice to the same spot for knockdowns in the final rounds. Had the fight gone several rounds more Baldwin would probably have knocked out his opponent.

Another match will probably be arranged for the pair to meet within the next few weeks as the fans were pleased with the clever way in which both of the aspirants for the lightweight title handled themselves.

BUCK BURKE WINS OVER DAN MARINGO

NEW BEDFORD, Nov. 21.—Buck Burke of Fall River won a decision over Dan Maringo of this city in the liveliest of the six-round bouts put on by the Seventh Bristol A. A. Burke did the cleaner work and was on the aggressive throughout. Though Maringo slugged busily during the in-fighting, Burke had a long lead at the finish. Fighting Dick Miller of Pawtucket made short work of Arthur Morrow of this city. Before the first round was over, Miller shot a right to Morrow's jaw that sent him down for a clean knockout. Young Clark of Fall River made a punching bag of Pat Gallagher of this city for four rounds, the referee stopping the bout.

M'GREGORVILLE A. C. PUTS ON GOOD CARD

MANCHESTER, Nov. 21.—The McGregorville A. C. conducted a spirited program of boxing and wrestling in its headquarters in Gresley Hall with a large attendance. John Paradise of this city and John Mackie of Norwood, Mass., met in a catch-as-catch-can wrestling bout. The men wrestled for one hour and thirty minutes without a fall. The bout was then declared a draw. Young Garon and Kid Gallagher of this city boxed six rounds to a draw and Kid St. Onge defeated Young Nicholas Ketsas in two straight falls at wrestling.

WALCOTT IN DRAW WITH AL RUDOLPH

EASTPORT, Me., Nov. 21.—Chester Walcott, the Boston colored lightweight, went six fast rounds to a draw with Al Rudolph, the Brooklyn Welterweight, at the Opera House. Walcott, in the first three rounds, landed heavily on Rudolph's body, but rounds four, five and six were in favor of Rudolph, who was the cleverer boxer. He got inside Walcott's guard repeatedly with left-hand swings and would have been declared the winner on points. John Cox, a local welterweight, knocked out Louis Nicholas, an Indian of the Passamaquoddy tribe, in the second round.

SALEM CHINAMAN LOSES IN FAST BOUT

The Quincy A. A. held its amateur bouts and Bobby Gerstel and Harry Archung, the clever Salem Chinaman, furnished a fast three-round bout in which the Neponset boxer won. Harry Carlson of Brockton knocked out York O'Connell in two rounds in the special 115-pound class. In the open classes L. Doyle of Roxbury defeated Jack Noonan in three rounds in the 115-pound class. Walter Ochs won the 125-pound class by defeating Franz Cecile in three rounds, and Harry Stewart won the 125-pound class, defeating Joe White in three rounds.

"CYCLONE CY" SMITH LOSES TO YOUNG ERNE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—Young Erne has won another bout by taking the measure of "Cyclone Cy" Smith of Jersey City. Smith was a tough one, though, and took his medicine without flinching. After the first round Smith would come out of his corner with a rush, but Erne sidestepped his vicious blows. In the third session Cy was compelled to seek shelter on the mat three times.

A good crowd of boys from Mechanic Arts and Boston Latin were out on the Huntington avenue grounds this afternoon when the elevens of those schools lined up for battle. This game had much to do in deciding the championship team of the Boston high schools and both teams battled hard for high honors. Mechanic Arts was the favorite at the start, but they had to battle hard for each yard gained.

Just now Mechanic Arts is the logical choice for the premier honors in the Boston High School League. At the first of the year Commerce was picked to win the championship, but the team was put out of the running when it lost to Mechanic Arts by a score of 11 to 0 last Wednesday.

"CYCLONE" BURNS TO WRESTLE POLSKI

"Cyclone" Burns, the Boston heavyweight wrestler, will be the opponent for Polski, the Finlander, in one of the all-star bouts to be decided in Mechanics' Building on Thanksgiving night. Polski will have some weight advantage over Burns, but the splendid work of the latter in the past year and his marked improvement make him feel that he has at least an even chance of winning against the foreign crack. Burns announces that if he should be the winner he intends to get after all the crack light heavyweights, including Americus and Demetral, the Greek champion, who is also after the scalp of the Baltimore wonder. Burns and Polski will meet, best two out of three falls, catch-as-catch-can style. This style is the favorite style of the Boston man.

HURLEY WINS EASILY FROM JERRY GAINES

PITTSFIELD, Nov. 21.—The three bouts on the card here were all so one-sided, that the referee was obliged to step in and stop them. In the main bout Bill Hurley of Glens Falls, N. Y., beat Jerry Gaines of Boston. Gaines was so clearly outclassed that the referee stopped the fight in the third round. The preliminaries, both of which were also stopped, were between Young Josie of Worcester and "Kid" Allard of Adams and Billy Roberts of Brockton and Chris Allen of Canaan, Ct. Allard and Roberts had the better of the matches.

KID SCALER FIGHTS DRAW WITH O'NEIL

WESTFIELD, Nov. 21.—Kid Scaler and Philadelphia Jack O'Neil fought ten fast rounds to a draw at the meeting of the Whip City A. C. There was not a dull moment in the fight. The final round was the fastest. Both men fought head to head. In the preliminaries Johnny Gallant of Boston defeated Chick West of Holyoke in six rounds. Andy Williams of New York and Joe Freeman of Holyoke fought four rounds in the other preliminary.

Indian a Topnotcher in Many Branches of Athletics

CARLISLE, Nov. 21.—The 1911 football season has brought into the public eye a young Indian student at the Carlisle School who promises to become one of the greatest athletes the world has ever seen.

James Thorpe, a Sac and Fox from Oklahoma, came to Carlisle in 1908 with no knowledge whatever of athletics, and since then he has accomplished such a marvellous variety of athletic feats on floor, gridiron, diamond, track and in the field that the world of college trainers has been astonished by his achievements.

It is difficult for any one to believe that an apparently normal youth could rank among the leading athletes of the world in more than one or two, or perhaps three, special lines of activity.

But James Thorpe has approached world records in so many lines of activity that physical trainers are at a loss to account for his feats of strength and endurance.

All-Star in All Sports.

Thorpe is not only a basketball player, at which game he fills the centre position with truly remarkable skill, but he is a baseball pitcher of great talent, and covers any of the sacks or outfield positions with as much credit as a professional player.

He can put the 16-pound shot 43 feet, and broad jump 22 feet 10 inches. He has done much better than this in practice. He can run 100 yards in 10 seconds. His school record is 10 1-5 seconds.

When he tries the high jump his measure is 6 feet, but he has done better than that. The high hurdles are easy for him in 15 4-5 seconds, while he negotiates the 220-yard hurdles in 26 seconds.

This youthful Redskin hunts, plays lacrosse, tennis, indoor baseball, handball, hockey all with equal skill, and can fill almost any position in a football team with credit.

On the Gridiron.

As football halfback he is probably seen at his best, whirling, twisting, dashing and plunging, for one moment bewildering his opponents with lithe, panther-like leaps, and the next crushing his way through a mass of would-be tacklers with the ferocity of an enraged bull.

One great American coach said after seeing him play at Pittsburg that it was worth five times the admission to a game to see Thorpe tear down the field for one sport.

Thorpe is only twenty-two years old, is six feet tall and averages about 178 pounds in weight. He gave little promise of his wonderful talents until his second year at Carlisle, when, in a dual meet against Syracuse University, the aboriginers were victorious by a narrow margin.

Thorpe won the high jump, broad jump, and was first in the high and low hurdles, defeating Thor in the shotput and getting second place in the hammer throw.

The same year, at the Pennsylvania intercollegiate meet at Harrisburg, Thorpe won the high jump, with a jump of six feet, broad jump, hammer throw and high and low hurdles.

A week or two later, in the Middle Atlantic District Athletic Association meet, held at Philadelphia, he took first place in the five events mentioned above.

During his second year at Carlisle, Thorpe was a first substitute on the football eleven and played in several games. The next year he played regularly as left half-back and began to show stellar qualities. He punted well and kicked field goals.

He scored the touchdown which tied Penn. After school, in 1909, he took his Summer vacation and did not return in the Fall, although his term of enrolment here had not expired.

MAY STOP BOXING IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—Followers of boxing in this city are alarmed over the possibility that Mayor-elect Rudolph Blankenburg, when he takes office next month, may stop public exhibitions. This fear has arisen from the actions of the promoters in treating boxing more as a commercial proposition than as a clean sport.

The fighters themselves are up in arms, but dare not make an open conflict because of the fear of being blacklisted altogether. Each manager of a club is said to have a stable of fighters who are the only ones apparently able to appear in a local ring. According to one of these fighters, he usually is supposed to get 30 per cent. of the house when he appears in a windup, but instead he really gets only 5 per cent.

ATTELL WINS FAST BOUT FROM JONES

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Willie Jones of Brooklyn gave Abe Attell, the featherweight champion, a chance to show more of his wares than Abe usually shows, when the two clashed at the Olympic A. C. The elusive Abe jabbed, hooked and blocked without any trouble, and climbed out of the ring with another victim added to the long list. Abe won with plenty to spare, and Jones's face will bear testimony of Attell's prowess for days to come. But Willie must be given credit for taking all that Abe handed out, being at all times willing to mix matters with the champion.

KIRBY ELECTED HEAD OF A. A. U.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Gustavus T. Kirby of New York, chairman of the executive committee of the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A., was elected president of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States.

Four vice-presidents of the Union also were elected, as follows: First, A. J. Lill, St. Joseph A. C., Boston; second, Dr. B. M. Hopkinson, Baltimore A. C., Baltimore; third, George James, Olympic A. C., San Francisco; fourth, John J. O'Connor, Missouri A. C., St. Louis. James E. Sullivan was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

In his annual report Everett C. Brown, the retiring president, said the union was growing in strength, despite "the attacks of envious critics in this country and jealous rivals in other countries."

Mr. Brown said that the team to represent the United States at the Olympic games in Sweden in 1912 will be the best the country has ever sent abroad. The report recommended Chicago as the natural place for all-around championship meets because the number of entries in these events in that city in the last two years had exceeded those at any place since the championships have been contested.

The amendment to bar for two years an athlete, who, having competed as a member of one club, shall within a year endeavor to compete for another club, was modified so as to make the penalty one year, and passed.

Another important change in the rules regulates the district in which a college athlete may compete. Heretofore this matter was decided by the place of residence of the athlete. Under the new rule the location of his college or university will be the controlling factor.

SOCCER FOOTBALL IS BECOMING POPULAR

BEVERLY, Nov. 21.—The United Shoe Machinery soccer football team of this city, which has had a fairly good season this Fall, will line up against the fast Charlestown team, the leaders of the Boston and District Soccer League, on the McKay street grounds, this city, next Saturday afternoon. This sport was introduced into this city last year, although at first hardly a dozen people would attend the home games, but after the local aggregation commenced to trim the Boston teams the sport became popular, and this year nearly every game draws 200 or 300 fans who take much interest in the sport.

SOMERVILLE NOT TO PLAY WALTHAM AGAIN

Although the school officials of Waltham and Somerville High Schools have met and tried to arrange a post-season game between the elevens of the two schools, it has been announced that the teams will not meet on the gridiron again this season. The Waltham management is trying to arrange a game with either Everett High or Quincy High.

READ'S FIVE IS OUT FOR GAMES

The William Read & Sons, five, under the management of Herbert L. Leddy, have organized for the coming season and will be represented on the floor with a team composed of former high school stars. The quintet will play its opening game with Winthrop on Thanksgiving night. The team is sanctioned by the A. A. U. and has already arranged games with the Winthrop, Reading and Franklin High schools.

The five will be made up of Soncey and Gersumbay, formerly of the Boston Latin School, O'Day of English, Brown of Mechanic Arts and Clesbe and Proctor, the former Revere high school stars. The five will be coached by Henry McCarthy of Winthrop, who has made an enviable record, both as a player and coach.

STONES THROWN AT BROCKTON PLAYERES

TAUNTON, Nov. 21.—After the football game between Taunton High and Brockton High School, which the former won, 8 to 5, the Brockton contingent, teachers, rooters and players, were stoned out of town. When the visiting team boarded the electric car for home, stones were thrown at the players, breaking the glass. Several of the players were struck by flying glass. Head Master Whitcomb received a severe gash over his right eye. The Taunton school players had nothing to do with the assault upon the visiting team, as it was the work of several hundred rowdies who were at the game. The game was evenly contested.

terested in the law and politics of that city. Being a Democrat, and a red-hot one, he had moved to New York and had become connected with Tammany, and in a short time was a power. The methods of Dick Croker, and Tammany methods in particular, did not, however, appeal to the lawyer, and becoming disgusted with conditions, he left Tammany and endeavored to clean up, as far as he was able, the politics of the city.

He was also prominent socially. He was a member of the Manhattan Club; a trustee of the New York Club, of No. 20 West Fortieth street; a member of the Hardware Club, which is a lunch club of prominent business men of New York; an Elk, and a member of the Knights of Pythias.

Under Seth Lowe's administration of New York, Mr. Russell was appointed senior commissioner of accounts, one of the most important financial commissions of the municipal government. That body handled the accounts of every other department of the city's administration, and was the most powerful and far-reaching of all the city's organizations. A big honest man was necessary for its head, and Mr. Russell was the "big honest man."

Baseball Was His Fad.

Those who had seen how prominent he had been in business activities, were at a loss to know when he bought the Boston club, how he would devote his time to running a ball team. Only his personal friends knew that at heart he always wanted a baseball club to play with.

He had always been a National League man. He did not care much for the American League. That's why he bought the Doves.

Shortly after George Dovey's death, when John C. S. Dovey, although president, was merely the nominal owner; having disposed of a greater part of his stock to John P. Harris, Mr. Russell attempted to buy the stock from the theatrical man. Mr. Harris then controlled, it is said, about 80 per cent. of the club.

Transfer of the Boston Team.

Harris had been planning for some time to dispose of his holdings, but the right man had not come along. So many and so varied were the interests held by the theatrical man that his lawyers deemed it advisable to give up this proposition, and the sale was agreed upon, a part of the money being paid over at the time to bind the deal.

The transaction was not completed at the time of the annual meeting, however, and Mr. Harris threw a veil of mystery over the affair by going through the ceremony of electing himself president, putting in Mr. Russell as a director, and retaining Fred Lake as manager, Mr. Dovey as treasurer, and Mr. Kelley as secretary, all of which was highly pleasing to those gentlemen's friends.

Mr. Russell was interested in several Massachusetts and Boston business propositions, and known as the vice-president and one of the largest stockholders of the Quincy Quarry Company.

PERRY LEADS AT BAT IN EASTERN LEAGUE

The official batting averages of the Eastern League show that Perry, the fleet-footed outfielder whom the Red Sox brought from the Coast last Spring and turned over to Providence, leads the league in batting, with an average of .343. Thoney, who was sent by the Red Sox to Jersey City, had a batting average of .261, while Freddy Parent, the old Boston favorite who was turned loose by the White Sox, hit for a total of .265. Otto Deininger, the Roxbury boy, now with Jersey City, had an average of .274, and French, formerly of the Red Sox and Washington, hit for .245. Rochester, which won the pennant this year, had the highest team average, .273.

PRINCETON TO HAVE BIG CEELEBRATION

PRINCETON, Nov. 21.—Princeton will celebrate the winning of the football championship of the Eastern Colleges next Thursday night, when a bonfire will be built over the historic Princeton cannon. The party will be the biggest held in Princeton in years. Hundreds of graduates will return to take part in the festivities. Speeches will be made by Captain Hart, Coach Roper and the members of the team.

JOE WAGNER LOSES.

HAL CHASE TO QUIT DIAMOND

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Hal Chase, manager and first baseman of the New York Yankees, announced to-day that he is going to quit baseball. Chase has invested in a business venture which promises to be a big money maker, he says, and by giving it his personal attention he can do far better financially than by sticking to the game.

Frank Farrell, owner of the team, is making every effort to have Chase reconsider and stay with the team as first baseman. Farrell believes that a good part of Hal's motive is in the fact that he found his managerial duties irksome and he is planning to hold a last conference with the great first sacker and endeavor to have him stick as a player, pure and simple, and transfer the management to other shoulders.

Chase, apparently, is firm in his determination to quit, however. "I invested some of my savings in a venture and they have now grown to $20,000," said Chase to-day. "By giving my time to the business I can make money fast and in a congenial way. I can't tell you at this time just what the business is but I am surely going to cut out everything else for it and that's final."

PERCIVAL WINS.

In the thirty-fifth game of the C Class amateur billiard tourney at the Elite, Percival defeated Leroy, 150 to 81. To-night Klocken plays Leroy.

Wolgast and Welsh Start Training for Title Bout

By JACK CONWAY.

Champion Ad Wolgast and Freddy Welsh have started training for their twenty-round bout at Vernon on Thanksgiving Day. The mill promises to be one of the greatest that has been pulled off in this country for several months.

It will be a bitter struggle between one of the greatest lightweights ever developed in this country and the former lightweight champion of England. The outcome of the fray will be anxiously awaited by sport lovers throughout the civilized world.

When the gong clangs at the end of the final round, provided a knockout punch is not scored inside the limit by either of the battlers, Jack Welsh will not hesitate in giving the decision to the boxer who has the slightest advantage.

The Briton at first objected to Welsh as referee. He claimed that Welsh advocates infighting too strongly and that he would let the Cadillac farmer pull off all the "rough stuff" he desired.

But as has been true in every other case where a champion and a near champion were arranging for a bout the champion has been the one to decide all points of dispute. In most cases where the near champion refused to concede to the requests of the title holder he was not given an opportunity to meet the champion.

Ad On Hunting Trip.

Wolgast is now on a hunting trip and is reported as being in excellent condition. "Cherokee" Tom Jones' fighting machine believes that the outdoor life is of tremendous advantage to a boxer when training for a big bout. The fresh air of the mountains makes a fighter healthier, while the long tramps over the hills hardens every muscle in his body and gets rid of all superfluous flesh.

The champion does not intend to do a great deal of boxing until the latter part of this week. He says that a few days' workout in the gymnasium will make his gauge of distance as good as ever.

The Michigan "Wildcat" isn't doing a great deal of talking about the coming battle. At the best Ad is a very poor talker, and this is especially so on the eve of an important bout. When put under the "third degree" out on the coast he said that he would stop Welsh inside of the limit if the latter would fight, but if the Englishman persisted in doing a Dorando around the ring the fight might go the limit, but regardless of whether the fight went the limit or not Wolgast said that he would win.

Welsh says that he will easily outpoint Wolgast. Instead of fighting Wolgast, Welsh intends to box him at long range and pile up a big lead. But then it is one thing to make such a statement when seated in a comfortable arm chair and another thing to practice these principles inside the ring with the Western terror.

Wolgast usually keeps covered up at the opening of a bout and waits until his antagonist leads and when he leads he opens up and lets go terrific rights and lefts. Welsh, however, says that he will not fall into such a trap. This, too, is easier said than carried out.

There is no fear of Welsh putting Wolgast down for the count as he lacks the punch. But Wolgast is liable to knock Welsh out. And if he does he will rightfully be considered the greatest lightweight champion of modern times.

"One Round" Hogan will soon shake the dust of Gotham from his feet and board a train for the West where he hopes to get a date with either Wolgast or Welsh. Hogan has a little grudge battle to settle with the Cadillac champion. It will be remembered that it was Wolgast who knocked Hogan cold when the latter was on the road to fame, glory and incidentally a goodly bunch of kale.

Al Delmont should not experience a great deal of difficulty in defeating Fauike at Watervliet, N. Y., to-night. The Italian bantamweight is gradually getting into the best of condition. After a little more training, Delmont says that he will be willing to meet the best bantamweights in the world. Now that the boxing season has got into full swing it wouldn't be a bad idea to match Delmont and Walsh at 118 pounds. When these boys last met in this city the affair was called a draw.

"Irish Paddy" Callahan tells me that he will slip one over on Kid McDonald at New Bedford to-morrow night. Callahan is one of the classiest boxers of his weight around New England. Callahan has experienced a great deal of difficulty in getting matches as leading boys in New England have been afraid to take a chance of getting their reputations injured by a defeat at the hands of Callahan. "Irish Paddy" is a very clever boxer and also packs a terrific wallop.

Martin Canole should experience little difficulty in defeating Johnny Gallant when they meet at Fall River Thursday night. The old-timer is going at a great clip and is several classes above Gallant. Gallant isn't much of a boxer. He depends chiefly on his infighting to land him the bacon. It is very probable that Canole will be matched to meet Johnny Connolly at New Bedford in the near future. Connolly has been fighting as a professional for about a year and is now considered one of the best lightweights in New England.

KRAMER IN OLYMPIC CROSS-COUNTRY RUN

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—An almost certain member of the American team for next year's Olympiad in Stockholm is William Kramer, the best of them all in the cross-country running game. His recent running has shown him in the best form of his successful career. It is expected that if the Loud Island champion makes the trip he will participate in the cross-country run of about 8,000 metres, or about four miles. Twelve competitors from each nation will be permitted to start, and it is believed Kramer has an excellent chance to win this race from the great English runners.

TAYLOR POSTS $50 FOR MATCH WITH SMITH

Norman Taylor of Waltham recently challenged John Y. Smith of Boston to a weight lifting contest and the latter accepted. The two men then signed articles. Later Smith refused to go to Waltham, claiming there was no money to bind the match. Taylor has posted $50 with a Waltham paper for his appearance in case of a match between the two men, which must take place before December 10, or the forfeit money will be taken back.

BIG NIGHT FOR THE BOWLERS

The rollers of the Custom House League get together at the New Boston alleys this evening in three matches which are bound to bring out some good scores.

The Appraisers now have a safe lead of eight points and will have the Inward Foreign for their opponent. The Naval Office meet the Warehouse quintet, while the Inspectors will try out the mettle of the Storekeepers.

If the Appraisers continue to roll at the same gait they have been traveling all season the Inward Foreign will find them hard to stop. The latter team is in third position and well in need of points to catch the leaders.

In the Bank and Trust League matches at the New Boston the Shawmut should not find it a hard task in subduing the American. A very small margin separates the former team and the Shawmut camp so that the leaders cannot afford to lose this evening's match. In the other matches in this league the Inspectors and Storekeeps, the two tail-end teams meet.

The Ramblers have a chance to jump into third position in the Malden City League in the advent of taking the match from the Linden at the Auditorium alleys.

The other match scheduled in this league is between the St. Paul and the Elliot teams. The latter team is tied for fifth place with Melrose and will try to annex enough points to give them a comfortable lead over the Melrose quintet.

Three of the four teams that are tied for fifth position in the Columbus League roll at the Columbus alleys to-night. The Mt. Vernon five tackles the Quincy team which is at present in last place, and unless the latter springs an unlooked for surprise the Mt. Vernon team should take at least three out of the four points.

ESTERBROOK BEATS WARREN IN MATCH

Easterbrook of Brooklyn defeated Warren of Boston, 50 to 43, in their National Billiard League three-cushion match at the Imperial. Esterbrook's average was .45 and Warren's .39. The winner had a high run of four, while Warren's best was two. Revers of Brooklyn will play against Amidon of Boston to-night.

WOBURN HIGH TEAM BEATS WINCHESTER

On the wet field at Woburn Woburn High defeated Stoneham High, 10 to 0. Woburn worked the forward pass to good advantage, and most of its long gains were made through this style of play. Wall, Foley and Lawson excelled for the winners, and Dempsey and Holden for the losers.

Potter and Felton Again Out With Crimson Squad

By TED PARKE.

A little more work for the Harvard eleven will suffice to put that aggregation into trim for the big game with the Bulldog next Saturday, and the bulk of this work will come this afternoon behind closed doors in the Stadium.

The work will not be hard, and in all probability there will be nothing in the way of a real rough and tumble scrimmage this week. That sort of thing is a matter of the past and the work will be limited to a tackleless scrimmage, the kind that has characterized Coach Haughton's regime from the start.

To-morrow the work will also be light and of the same kind, to smooth the rough spots from the team, and give it the final touch which it is hoped will be enough to put the Eli's to rout for the first time in the history of the Stadium.

On Thursday afternoon Harvard students and whosoever wishes to make the trip to the Stadium will have an opportunity to see the big Crimson eleven in practice. At this time the practice will be open for the first time since along in the middle of October. There will probably be a little scrimmaging between some teams, although it is well known from experience that the varsity never gets into action on such occasions, and the only excuse for this sort of an affair is to give the student body an opportunity to march to the field with a big brass band and lots of enthusiasm and show the team that the college is behind it.

Hold Mass Meeting.

There was a big mass meeting in the Union last night at which enthusiasm ran riot and there will be another one to-morrow night to get the students worked up to even a higher pitch for the doings of the following day.

As a matter of fact, as Captain Fisher has said, the team is really aided a great deal in its playing when it knows that the college is behind it in every move, and for that reason everything is being done to get the students into that state where they will give the team a tremendous backing on Saturday.

Thursday evening the squad will leave Cambridge for a little rest away from the noise of the city and just have an easy time with a little final signal work each afternoon before the game. Just where they will go has not been decided, but it will probably be either to the South Natick Inn or perhaps out to the Myopia Hunt Club.

Yesterday the work was light and, contrary to the custom in past weeks, every man on the varsity with two exceptions was out in togs for work. The two who did not report were Blackall and Wendell, these men being given a rest till to-day.

That everyone was on the field was an encouraging sign and showed that they had all come through the perilous game with Dartmouth in fine shape.

Potter Out for Practice.

Probably the best feature of the practice was the appearance of Bob Potter, the quarterback, on the field in togs and ready to do some work. He was not tried in the signal drill however, but merely ran a couple laps about the field. He ran without the least sign of a limp and there is every probability that he will be played against Yale Saturday.

That this is a possibility should cause the Harvard stock to rise a bit. Gardner, who lead the Harvard team against the Green, put up a good game, but at the same time he is not as good a man as Potter for several reasons.

The first of these is that he is not as sure a man in the backfield as Potter under kicks. Although he hung onto the ball fairly well in the Dartmouth game, he misjudged a number of kicks and never seemed to be very certain of himself.

Potter, on the other hand, is one of the surest men under kicks that Harvard ever had, and his catching of punts over his head and every which way is nothing short of phenomenal, while he gets away fast and is a beautiful runner in a broken field, as his long sprint against Brown will testify.

In the second place Potter is the only quarter Harvard has who has real good aim with the forward pass. His height aids him greatly in this, while his baseball ability also gives him an advantage over the other quarters.

Despite the fact that he has been out of the game for a couple of weeks, he is ordinarily so much better than his other competitors for the quarter position, that his presence on the team will be a big asset to the eleven against Yale.

Felton Does Light Work.

Felton, the punter, was also out in togs and took part in the light work that was given the men. He alternated with O'Brien at end in the signal drill and during the afternoon he tried a few kicks just to keep in form.

Blackall, who bore the brunt of the kicking in the Dartmouth game, did well, considering that he is a new man in varsity football, but his punts lacked the form of Felton's and also, more important, the distance. Felton has beautiful form and his kicks average well around the fifty-yard mark.

Harvard will need some one of his calibre to off-set the kicks of Camp, the Yale punter, in the coming game, and realizing this, Coach Haughton decided to keep Felton out of the Dartmouth struggle and save him for the big fight this week.

He has completely recovered from the muscle bruise received in the Brown game, and a little hard work this week will get him into first rate shape for the final contest.

The work reverted to a rudimentary drill, each player being trained by his respective coach in the science of his position. This sort of work will polish the players off into perfect fighting trim, and some of the men who are new to their positions, such as Storer, need just this kind of thing.

Hold Signal Drill.

Following this the team lined up and ran through signals for half an hour. The lineup was the same in substance as against Dartmouth except that Wendell and Blackall were not in the line.

There is little chance that any change will be made before Saturday, for the lineup last week worked to perfection and, besides, a change at this late date might work havoc with what team play the eleven has developed.

Huntington will remain at centre, for his playing there against Dartmouth was a revelation and marked him as the man for the job, while Blackall is a good enough man for the position of fullback.

Storer's playing at right tackle was also a revelation and he is the best man that Coach Haughton could have chosen for the job, and unless someone phenomenal comes along next year from the freshman eleven, he will probably hold onto this job.

The lineup of the eleven was: L. e., Smith; l. t., Hitchcock; l. g., Leslie; c., Huntington; r. g., Fisher; r. t., Storer; r. e., O'Brien and Felton; q. b., Gardner; l. h. b., Morrison; r. h. b., Campbell; f. b., T. H. Frothingham.

TECH ISSUES FIRST CALL FOR CREWMEN

Technology's crew enthusiasts got an early season start by holding an initial meeting of candidates at the Tech Union. Eighteen candidates reported as desirous of trying for the crew. They were addressed by Coach O'Leary, who again has Tech in charge. He spoke of the loss of Captain Gere, who is spending the year abroad, and said that without his help and leadership in the boat Tech would have a difficult time to develop an eight as good as that of last year. Five members of last year's boat are back and will be given a chance for their old positions. The remainder of the crew, including possibly a stroke, must be developed from new material. Four rowing machines have been installed in the Tech gymnasium, where the men may begin early training. Regular indoor work for the crew will be started in January.

YALE COACHES ARE WORRIED

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 21.—"There isn't likely to be any scrimmaging of the Yale eleven to-day," said Captain Arthur Howe this morning. Howe is in charge of the campaign although battered and worn down to the bone by the Princeton game.

Head Coach Jack Field and ex-Captain Tom Shevlin, who have directed the coaching, are expected back to-day in time for the afternoon practice. No start has yet been made to directly plan the Harvard game campaign and the coaches are expected to get busy on this right away.

Decide on Eleven To-night.

The selection of the eleven will be decided to-night by the coaches. Gallauer is extremely likely to be in Paul's place at right tackle, but it is a toss-up between Dunn and Philbin for fullback. Philbin has a shade the better on Dunn in steadiness but handles punts poorly. The coaches are far from unanimous in their decision of the proper person to take punts in the Stadium.

Captain Howe's unsteady exhibition Saturday causes a great deal of worry for the coaches. Some of them favor Walter Camp, but his slowness in running the ball back handicaps him badly.

There is some criticism heard on the campus against the present coaching system, which has failed to relieve Howe of the details of running the eleven for two or three days. None of the regular coaches except Dr. Bridges was present at practice yesterday.

Daly and Savage Present.

With Dr. Brides were Fred Daly, last year's captain, and Savage, the former end and fullback. They met as deadly enemies last Sat'r'ay, when Daly was head coach of the Williams and Savage of the Amherst elevens, but they pocketed their differences over Sunday.

The veteran coach, Frank Hinkey, has not been located this season, but Captain Howe seeks him. He is looked for to-day. The Yale eleven left Meriden yesterday and were in New Haven at nine o'clock. They reported for the usual afternoon practice, which they played between a snow squall and a rain shower. A short punting practice and signal work bounded their activities.

Because of the soaking, dragging through the mud and the tearing which the Yale uniforms received Saturday, they were not all repaired and laundered, and in some cases the players turned out with substitute suits.

How to Be Beautiful

By MARGARET HUBBARD AYER

"WHY am I so thin?" writes a reader of this paper. "I eat quite heartily. There seems to be no reason why I should not weigh as much as other girls of my height."

Many thin people have very good appetites. That doesn't mean that they have good digestions or adequate powers of assimilation. A hearty appetite is a bad sign, rather than a good one, if, for a long time, no increase in weight has been noticed. If the appetite were normal, and other conditions favorable, there ought to be an increase in weight, providing the food were of a suitable kind. But a girl may say she has a hearty appetite for coffee and pie, or pickles and lobster salad, and she may eat large quantities of these delicacies, without the appetite being normal in any way. Sometimes the liver is to blame, or some other organ is not functioning properly, disturbing the digestion and creating a craving for plenty of food, but not for food of a nourishing kind.

The girl who is too thin needs four things—plenty of fresh air, plenty of sound sleep, absence from worry, and exercise. If she has these the food question will easily take care of itself. She will want the food that is good for her and crave starchy, fat-making edibles.

Fresh air is the most important factor of all, and the thin girl can't get too much of it. She should avoid being cold, as cold is one of her enemies, and she should wear a sweater, leggins, warm petticoats and wristlets or gauntlets with her gloves when necessary, but she should insist on having fresh air.

The thin girl ought to sleep ten hours out of the twenty-four, and she should sleep in a room with the window open. She should have plenty of covers on her bed, and the hot water bottle at her feet, when she goes to bed. The thin girl doesn't want to try to be heroic; ice-cold baths are not for her—nor very hot ones, for that matter. Nor should she undertake exhausting walks or try to train for athletic championships of any kind. She should have steady calisthenic exercises for half an hour every day—fifteen minutes in the morning and fifteen at night; and, if she can, she should indulge herself to the utmost in the way of naps during the day or lounging about in loose, warm clothing.

Absolute freedom from care and anxiety are supposed to be necessary to her if she wants to gain flesh; but, alas, we can't always regulate the antics of fate which deny us these delightful privileges. One thing, however, the thin girl ought to be able to master, and that is physical repose. She may have to attend to many duties during the day; she may even have to work for her living, but whatever she does she can economize and save her strength by cutting out some of her unnecessary physical activities. The thin woman is apt to make two gestures where one would do, or take four steps where two would have served the purpose.

Worrying over petty things is largely a bad mental habit, and if one puts all the will power one is capable of to conquer this one characteristic, mental and physical repose will develop of themselves. Make up your mind to stop worrying about the small things. Train yourself not to think of them, and soon you will be able to tackle the large worries and dispose of them too.

The thin woman should be careful not to upset her digestion by eating anything that does not agree with her. Tea and coffee have no nutritive value and the latter is indigestible in its ordinary form. Cocoa is the best thing the thin woman can drink. The rest of the diet must be of the most nourishing kind, consisting largely of foods containing starch and sugar, such as cereals, sweet potatoes, beans, fish, nourishing soups, beef and mutton and green salads to promote digestion. A glass of hot milk taken the last thing before going to bed helps the nervous, tired woman to sleep better and aids her in gaining flesh.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BE GLAD OF YOUR ESCAPE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been acquainted with a young man for seven months. In the past few months he has been treating me cold, although he said he cared for me. I wrote to him, but have no reply. He answered.

H. C.

DO not worry, my child, about a man who treats you so. He is not worthy even of your friendship.

In due time some one will come into your life who will really care for you, and you will be glad to have escaped this man, who has so heartlessly made you suffer.

THE MAN IS IN THE RIGHT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a good-looking girl, twenty-one years of age, and I am acquainted with a young man four years my senior. What would you do when he objects to my wearing rats in my hair and using rouge? He claims I file my finger nails too short and wear the heels of my shoes too low. He is continually nagging at me, and still he claims he is desperately in love with me, and he certainly shows it. We have kept steady company a year. Last week he proposed to me. Do you think it advisable to marry this man?

M. C. F.

YOU both are at fault. He has no right to criticise your personal appearance unless he has some claim on you. On the other hand, I, as a friend, would advise you not to use false hair nor rouge or anything else which is not natural.

Girls don't seem to realize that natural charms are more desirable than artificial. Do you love him? If you do and feel that you can make him a good wife, marry him.

AN UNPLEASANT FAMILIARITY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Do you think there is any harm if a fellow holds a girl by the arm, while promenading, when she only means him the second time, the fellow being up to the girl's house for the first time?

ANXIOUS.

SO many send me just such questions as yours. Such things are not wrong. It is merely not customary and perhaps not quite gentlemanly to touch a woman while walking.

The instinct to protect is quite proper, but not necessary in this case. This habit is considered a familiarity which is not pleasant or acceptable.

ASK FOR A SIX MONTHS' TEST

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of nineteen, and desperately in love with a dentist two years my senior. My mother does not like him at all. I have consented to be his bride without my mother knowing it. How shall I break the news to her?

M. G. B.

WHAT reason has your mother for not liking the young man? That is the first thing to be found out, and you must do it.

You never could be happy to marry against your parents' wishes; besides you owe it to your mother to respect what she says. You must do something definite before you go any further with the young man. I would go to my mother, tell her of my intentions, and ask for her objections. Then, if they are so strong as to cause her refusal to my plans, I would ask her if at the end of six months under the following conditions she would be willing for me to marry the man of my choice, namely, that in those six months I should neither see nor communicate with him. This is long enough to test the worth and love of any two people.

FIND OUT YOUR RELATIVES' OBJECTIONS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen years old and I have met a young man of twenty-one. I have been out with him once and he has called on me five times. I see him every other night, for he does not work far from my home. I like him very much, but my aunt and uncle do not care for him. They do not want us to go out together.

EMELIA S.

FIND out their objections, and if they are well founded, and if you are not seriously interested in the young man, it will cause neither him nor you any suffering, if you give him up.

However, if the reasons are merely personal, you have no cause to ignore him. Compromise by seeing him only at home; there can be no harm in this.

A Garden Lesson in Gratitude

The Hardy Chrysanthemum That Grows on the South Side of Almost Every Unpretentious Home Has a Purpose

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THERE grows on the south side of almost every unpretentious country home a plant that braves the storms Winter after Winter, puts forth tender little green leaves long before any other plant dares in the Spring, and in the Fall, long after every other garden flower has fallen into a sleep that is only for the season, or eternal, is still holding fast to every green leaf, and is covered with gay little button-sized flowers.

It is the hardy chrysanthemum—the chrysanthemum of storm and poverty. It grows on the south side of homes that are unpretentious—it is the chrysanthemum of the poor, and a brave little plant it is.

The chrysanthemum of the poor! For when wealth comes to those who planted it they forget its bravery and charm, and set their affections on the chrysanthemum that grows in a hothouse, with a flower as big as a cabbage, and with petals long enough to be put up on curl papers at night.

The story of the chrysanthemum is often the tragedy of the wife. A man is poor, and side by side in his battles, his discouragements, his disappointments, his wife fights with him—made plainer by the grind of conflict and want than she was as a girl—she forgets looks, self, youth, personal ambition—she remembers only that her husband needs her.

Like the little chrysanthemum, she holds up her head bravely through storm after storm, and she is the best he knows, and he is satisfied.

When such efforts as theirs are rewarded by wealth, the story of the hardy chrysanthemum is retold, for she who was good enough for him in the days of his poverty is not good enough for him now. He wants some one more showy, some one with style, some one who appeals to his pride and his vanity. He wants a chrysanthemum as large as a cabbage, with petals so long they could be done up in curl papers at night.

The woman who uses the dollar as measuring string and is disappointed if her husband because he fails short doesn't realize how much she has to be thankful for. Wealth develops the bigamous nature in most men, and when that nature awakes the end of a man's poverty is a good enough for him. What if he is poor. He belongs to her, and she belongs to him, and if he has any sneaking desire for a woman who is more showy it is the Lord's greatest blessing to her that he is so poor he can't afford it.

Repenting

AGNES was a little tot of five, with curling, flaxen hair, rosy-lily complexion—and a will of her own.

She had been ill-advised, not to say deliberately naughty, at the dinner table, and mamma had dismissed her to her bedroom, to remain in durance vile till she should express due contrition for her misbehavior.

Agnes cheerfully obeyed the parental order, and showed no spirit of repentance at the end of the first quarter of an hour.

When thirty minutes had elapsed, mamma called from an adjoining room:

"Agnes, dearie, aren't you sorry?"

There was no reply from the darkness beyond.

Ten minutes later the question was repeated. Back came the reply, in the patient dignity and childish treble of five Summers:

"Mamma, please don't ask me any more. I'll come and let you know when I'm sorry."

HICTANER

By Jean de la Hire

In Search of Moisette

AT 7 o'clock the next morning, as the sun was spreading its light across the sky, a large white flag was run up over Planier Lighthouse, in the harbor of Marseilles.

The white flag was saluted by two guns from the two torpedo boats which were slowly cruising around the lighthouse.

They were the Cyclone and the La Hire.

The Cyclone, still in command of De Ciscrat and Sainte Claire, had Admiral Germinet aboard.

The La Hire, under the brave young officer, Lieutenant Bonnans, and Ensign Hictaner, bore M. White.

The chief admiral and the president of the Congress were each given full powers, so that if misfortune came to either torpedo boat, the surviving plenipotentiary could treat with Hictaner and with Moisette, if she were found.

Four submarines were stationed a mile to the west of Planier Lighthouse, awaiting the Cyclone's orders.

Twenty of the strongest and most experienced divers had set out in the six boats.

On the afterdeck of the Cyclone, Admiral Germinet, Commandant de Ciscrat and First Mate Mathieu were standing together, while the rest of the crew were at their posts.

Day dawned gloriously. The sun rose slowly from the sea in a cloudless sky, and the waters were barely rippled by a soft breeze from the south, southwest.

"Hictaner cannot be far away," said Admiral Germinet.

"Surely he will arrange to find out each morning whether or not the white flag is flying. We shall not have to wait long for him."

"I hope not," said Ciscrat.

"Strange creature!" exclaimed the admiral. "Severer explained how Ozim had constructed a being who lived more easily in the water than on land.

"If we had not indisputable proof that Hictaner lived in the water, I should refuse to believe that——"

Hictaner Appears

"Admiral, there he is now!" cried Sainte Claire, pointing toward the Cyclone's starboard side.

"Stop," ordered the admiral.

"Stop!" echoed Commandant Bonnans aboard the La Hire.

The two boats reversed their engines and stopped almost instantly in a great seething whirlpool of churned-up water.

Fifty feet to starboard Hictaner appeared. He was swimming along the surface of the water with marvelous ease.

The silver scales on his body shone in the sun and the crystal mask covering his face was bright as a diamond.

When he had come within a few yards of the Cyclone, he took off his mask, lifted his handsome young face and called out in a clear voice:

"Admiral Germinet, may I have your word that if I come aboard the Cyclone, no attempt will be made upon my life or liberty?"

"You have my word of honor," replied the admiral, stretching out his hand as if taking an oath.

Hictaner bounded from the sea and alighted easily upon the torpedo boat's deck.

The admiral extended his hand, which Hictaner took respectfully, bowing to De Ciscrat and Sainte Claire, whom he recognized.

"Commandant," suggested the admiral, "the sea is quiet enough for a gang-plank to the La Hire from the Cyclone. Will you ask M. White to come aboard, please?"

While this was being done, Hictaner maintained impatient silence. When M. White had come aboard the Cyclone the gangplank was removed. M. White, too, gave his hand to Hictaner, who grasped it and bowed with respect.

"Monsieur," said M. White to Hictaner, whose questioning gaze he well understood, "we know where Mademoiselle Moisette may be found."

"You only know?" exclaimed the young man. "I thought the white flag was to mean that you had found Moisette!"

"We had no other way of reaching you," replied M. White.

"But, Admiral, I think we might go below to the mess room and continue our conversation more calmly."

"Yes," acquiesced the Admiral. "Commandant, I believe you know stenography?"

"Yes, sir," replied De Ciscrat.

"Then will you come with us and act as clerk? M. Sainte-Claire will take command while Hictaner is aboard."

Hictaner Excited

The two officers bowed, and while Sainte-Claire stayed on deck Hictaner, the Admiral and M. White, guided by De Ciscrat, went below to the mess room.

Hictaner was very much excited and he did not like it.

The young man, being unaccustomed to contact with men, with their lies and hypocrisy, had not learned to conceal his feelings and to feign all indifference which he did not feel.

He did not wait for the three men to be seated, but said promptly:

"Where is Moisette?"

M. White replied swiftly, repeating Serveur's revelation, and relating the story of M. Bertillon's unexpected intervention.

"We do not know, where to find the entrance to Roma Grotto," concluded M. White.

"Of course that is where Mademoiselle Moisette is hiding.

"While we proceed by sea to Cape Creus, the engineers and a battalion of the engineer corps will go by rail to the same place.

"The engineers will find the entrance to the grotto if it is on firm ground. However, we gathered from several details in Severse's story that his electric launch was submersible.

"Therefore it may be possible that the grottoes have a submarine entrance."

"In that case," said Hictaner joyfully, "I can discover it."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

"Hictaner" is running serially in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. A liberal instalment of this remarkable mystery novel will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN.

"I wish I could get rid of my dandruff. I'm fairly desperate," I heard a woman say the other night. "I shampoo my head twice a week, but in a few hours it is back again as bad as ever. How on earth do you keep your head so clean and free from dandruff?" "Easily," her friend replied, "and I use nothing but plain ordinary Lavona de composee such as any druggist sells, mixed with Bay Rum and a little Menthol Crystals, and apply it twice daily.

"Lavona is the technical or pharmaceutical name for the concentrated extract of the Pernamburo shrub of Para, which every physician can tell you is unexcelled as a germicide, antiseptic and dandruff cure. I used to get a few ounces by the pound before trying it, but after using a single bottle, which I got for 50c. at a downtown drug store, I simply go to my druggist and say 'A oz. Bay Rum, 1 oz. Lavona de composee and one-half oz. Menthol Crystals, mix them all together and allow them to stand for a few hours.' This I apply to the scalp and roots of my hair and into the scalp with my finger tips. I spent dollars for every advertised tonic that I thought would cure dandruff, but since I found this simple home remedy I have not been troubled with dandruff, and my hair is as soft and fluffy as a baby's. I have also noticed since using it that my hair has almost stopped falling out, and I have a scalp without scratching whatever applied, so if you use it be careful not to get it on the face or eyes as it will burn. I wonder more ladies don't use it."

The problem is now squarely up to Claude Eclaire and Desperate Desmond—how is Rosamond to be distinguished from the Turkish girls, all dressed alike and veiled? Will the lover succeed in solving the problem, or will the villain, who is, we must admit, just a bit keen-witted? You are yourself from the picture that the job is not an easy one, by any means.

Well, Desmond has made his plans. He has accepted a position as waiter in a coffee house much frequented by the young ladies of Constantinople. In this humble employment in the hope of spotting Rosamond, veiled though she may be, and accordingly he is greatly pleased to observe a large bevy of Turkish beauties enter the place and order cups of coffee.

But stay! One girl, seated by herself, has not given an order for Turkish coffee. To all outward appearances she is just an ordinary young lady of Constantinople. But no Turkish girl would ever dream of ordering "Vanilla nut sundae ice cream" in a hundred years. Nobody but a healthy young person with an American digestion would tackle that, and Desmond knows he has Rosamond.

How is Claude succeeding in his quest? He sees none one in Turkish costume and for some reason or other thinks that it may be Rosamond. Accordingly he follows the fancy, imploring Rosamond—if it be she—not to forget their little nest in Roxbury, furnished in mission, and on feudal ment style. But for a long time there is no response to his pleading.

At last Claude sees the object of his pursuit turn suddenly, and his heart beats faster as he expects to see Rosamond's bright eyes beam on him. But instead of feeling her soft glance upon him he feels an exceedingly hard and corrugated fist upon his classic features. For he has been following none other than Verusbird, the famous spy, and has spoiled his plans.

"Is the boy?" cries Desperate Desmond, "and it doesn't take much to fool Claude." The villain beats it with Rosamond in his arms, while our hero, who can hardly believe that Destiny could once more outwitted him, comes booming along behind. Claude may be clever at times, but he is persistent, and to-morrow you may see his usual triumph.

Woman Always the Victim

Has Shared Every Danger and Burden of Hero, but Is Among Unrecognized Heroines.

IN the tragedies enacted in the conquest of the plains, man has always been the hero and woman the victim. He turned his face toward the West because he was restless, ambitious or perhaps a dreamer. He had heard of a wealth of gold and fertile land on the other side of the plains and the mountains and wanted to move on. She, who rode at his side and left every friend behind, had no visions save that of love and children.

He has come down in history as the conqueror of the desert. She who shared every danger and burden has joined the number of unrecognized heroines, a list that is tragically large.

If she lived to reach the promised land of her husband's dreams, it was to hear the praises sung of the men who had won the fight. There was never poured into her ears any praise of what women had done.

These Graves Are Legion

"If she lived to reach the promised land." Patriotic societies in every city and town devote much time and bunting to the decorating of the graves of this country's heroes, but it is not on record that any effort has ever been made to mark the graves of the women who rode out from civilization in a mover's wagon and died of privation and suffering on the way.

The number of these graves on the plains is legion, and in the early days they marked a trail connecting the Middle West with the Pacific coast, telling a ghastly story of what woman had done in the conquest of the desert.

The [illegible]ecular cry of race suicide, sent up by [illegible]. don't bear the babies, was unknown in those days, and every mover's wagon carried babies, and when a destination was reached and a home was dug, the babies kept coming and the women who had survived the journey worked beside their husbands in field and forest while bearing them.

The demand on their love and courage often proved too great for even the superhuman strength of a mother, and statistics show that nine pioneers out of ten had two or three wives and many had four or five.

With the fruits of her labor left for future generations of women to garner, those who had borne the brunt of the battle passed away to a woman's heaven of rest, and when their descendants came forward in California the other day to ask for the fruit from the trees their mothers had planted the men dared to object. Ungrateful man forgot the part woman had played in putting California on the map and raised a howl of protest that was echoed in the hearts of ungrateful men throughout the nation. The women asked the right to have a hand in the governing of the State their mothers had died to make, and the men who had ridden from the East to the West in a mover's wagon on some woman's lap, or who had made the journey later in a train that carried them over the graves of the women who had helped to make that railroad possible, dared to declare that women were not fit to vote!

Never Know Appreciation

It would have been to the eternal disgrace of the State that owes more to women than any other State in the Union if they had been in the majority, but though their protests sounded like a majority their votes were not, and the women won.

It is a promising sign of man's growing intelligence when women win in a fight for the ballot, and in this case it is a sign of more than intelligence. It is a sign of appreciation. And appreciation is something that many, many women, working for husbands and babies all over the world, never know.

He fell into the silence of a man who strives not to listen.

Presently Martindale stood up; in the revealing lamplight his face showed gray and damp, and once again Baring had the uncomfortable fear of having done him an injustice. On the spur of his impulse he held out his hand.

"What can I do or say?" he said awkwardly. "I am anxious to be as little a nuisance as possible. You'll forgive me for the impertinence of a piece of advice —leave Africa."

Martindale nodded, swallowing down a bitter draught of pride. His would not have been human had he not felt wounded at a man infinitely less sensitive and kindly strung than he must have been conscious of the latest dislike and antagonism in Baring's voice.

"That is what I must do," he said.

He turned abruptly and went out of the dining room. Baring made no attempt to follow him. He played his part. Now the man and the woman must face the present and future alone.

Presently Martindale came up with a welcoming cry when Martindale entered the drawing room, and came forward to meet him. But he made no response to her welcome, and, she was conscious, now of a constraint she had not known before, when, weary and travel stained, he had caught her in his arms. She fought against it—coldness, misunderstanding now, and all the future was wrecked.

"Have you nothing to say to me, Jack?" she whispered. She laid her face against his arm, rubbing her face against it with a little furtive movement. "I'm one so much. I'm jealous of all those secret hidden hours you have spent away from me."

"Kitty"—he gathered her close against him with a groan—"where can one begin—where is the end to be—or is this the end?"

"Aren't you ungrateful—when danger has passed by us so harmlessly?" Kitty whispered. "It is the end, and is gone, like a dream. God has given us the future into our hands, Jack—whatever you will—how you will—when you will—"

He knew what her broken words had reference to; that she spoke of that public repentance and acknowledgment of their sin at which his letter had hinted. Holding her thus in his arms it seemed a thing outside the limits of possibility.

"Kitty, isn't it too late?" he said. "Is there no other way? God forgive me for my weakness, but I shrink from dragging you through the mire."

For the moment he had forgotten that as yet he had told her nothing of his meeting with Crowder. He was so convinced that the girl who had gone through the forest was going on, not to England and home, but to death, that the thought of his meeting with her remained with no suggestion of menace in his mind, but rather as a memory that must ever scourge him with remorse.

"Kitty—you know nothing—you don't know what happened," he broke out. "I was coming back to you—for the second time I was coming back to you—through the forest, and I met her—met her face to face."

Cut Him Short With Cry.

"Her . . ." Kitty's breath came unevenly as he told the story of that meeting. "If she should not die—God knows I don't wish that she should—I'm not so wicked—but—"

"It will be a dream to her," he said. "I know that. Grieve, the servant, who was with her, knew that—if she remembers it will be one of the visions of her fever—and if he dies—"

Kitty cut him short with a cry. She clung to him, sobbing like a child.

"Oh, Jack, take me home," she cried. "Shame—disgrace—punishment—anything—nothing could be worse than this piece of horror . . ."

He tried to soothe her with words of reassurance, and felt the rigidity of body slacken when he spoke of his plans for leaving Nokyoro.

"We'll leave the accursed place and start fresh," he whispered. "A new life—an innocent life—"

He felt her quiver and start in his embrace, drawing away from him. She had opened roughly, and Baring came hastily into the room.

"Sake!" His voice had a quick note of excitement that stirred his listener's blood.

"There's some feels' work on foot in the compound. There's a native rising of sorts—they're advancing on the bungalow—"

And, as he paused, as though punctuating his sentence, the melancholy roll of the war drum, beating at a distance, floated distinctly into the room.

It was the sound of that muffled drumbeat echoing so weirdly across the grass plains, growing louder and more distinct even as he listened, that brought home to Kitty's mind the truth of the fact that Marco Gomez had not remained content with threatenings, but was now proceeding to turn his threats into deeds.

He remembered what the half-caste had said to him the morning on which the native woman had received her liberty, when he had faced him in the sordid sitting room of the bungalow on the outskirts of the village of the slaves, like some creature whom rage had rendered hardly human.

The Threat of the Jungle

"You fool!" no had screamed, and in his fury his voice had been that of a native—full of gutturals and throat sounds. "You'll be sorry for this one time. You think you have done dash fine thing letting this woman go free. I tell you one time you ate a fool. She'll destroy you. And Marco Gomez will raise no hand to save you—sorry? Her people will make common cause with their oldest enemy against you, and they think you, to be the servant and not the master?"

Standing there with the grasp of Kitty's fingers on his arm, John Martindale in the space between two drumbeats understood what had happened. The slaves had risen; instead of fleeing, as he fancied, the slaves had risen and were rushing on the bungalow to destroy it.

And in that moment, when everything depended on the swiftness of decision, the remembrance of the things he had witnessed in the village, and the things of which he had heard, rushed over him like a black flood that threatened to submerge courage and self-control alike.

If the things he had done had been done under the impulse of madness of Africa working in his blood, at least God appeared to be about to exact the full payment for their committal.

It was Baring who, for the moment, took command.

"Their servants of yours—they've struck me as an uncertain lot—there's been something in the wind for days past. If I'd known anything of their huge I'd have spotted where the dry rot lay. But there's only two or three of 'em one can trust. Lord—if it had been in the daytime," he groaned.

"They'll not attack until daylight," Kitty said.

She had recovered from her fright. Her eyes were on her husband's face; to Baring it seemed to him as though by a supreme effort she was striving to will him to be a man. To bear himself as a man in this moment of crisis.

If so, he responded to the effort of her will. He seemed to Baring to be pulling himself together like a man roused suddenly out of sleep.

"Is there nothing among the servants?" he cried. "They must be chivied out—our only hope lies in closing and holding the stockade."

Hurried From Room.

He stopped, whispered a few words to Kitty and, shaking off her detaining hand, hurried from the room.

Perhaps there had been fear of a similar uprising in John Saxe's mind when he had planned this bungalow at Nokyoro; perhaps, for all that the present occupier knew, he had learned from the bitter experience of one. At any rate, in the first days of his coming to Nokyoro, Martindale had noticed this with surprise—there were means of securing the place against besiegers in an incredibly short time, means by a cunningly installed and costly system of far reaching searchlights on the compound and the servants' quarters.

Standing on the dark veranda at the back of the bungalow, the two men could hear the uproar from the neighborhood of the bewhere huts, the clatter of arms, the varied sounds of voices upraised in truculence of fear.

In the darkness behind them they heard a movement, and Baring turned in quick alarm. It was Kitty who had stolen out with their rifles. As Baring thanked her and grasped his he was thankful for that ability to "handle a gun cleanly," of which he had boasted to the man beside him in a moment of anger.

"Get back, dearest, don't let yourself be seen. But I shall want you for a moment or two just to help me to tell what they answer," Martindale whispered to his wife.

Frost Time---Home Time

By WINIFRED BLACK

B-R-R, there's frost in the air; good, friendly, "glad-to-see-you" frost that sends the blood to tingling in the veins and makes the slowest feet walk with some semblance of youth and sprightliness.

There—what's that patch of white on the grass over there in the shady corner? Yes, it's frost, sure enough. See how the children hurry along to school and call m-f-ph—what's that I smell, buckwheats?

I wonder if there's any real maple syrup left in the world? How far would you travel to get some?

The man at the corner downtown is very cheerful. He has on a dozen bags of fine chestnuts already—and was that a sweet potato roaster I saw trundlin- along a back street just now? Hurrah, frost is here!

Summer's dine for moonlight and see foam and rose fragrance and sweet notes of lug and a strain of expensive music under the starlight and the memory of some half forgotten dream, but for real hearty, know-what-you're-about-happiness give me the Winter and the Fall. Hurrah, I'm glad they are here. Only—what is getting to be the matter with the old fireplace?

I haven't seen a friendly flame since the frost came, except the one that leaps on my own heartbstone. I'd have a fireplace if I had to go without a rug in the house to do it, and I'd keep a fire there if I had to wear my last year's frock and year before last's hat to pay for the coal I burn.

Why, there's no sort of friendliness in a house at all without the play of leaping fire on the faces that gather around it.

Throw a handful of salt on that little handful of coals over there in the corner of the grate. Boo, who ever dreamed of such glorious riots of color—violet, green, that way. I've been rejected twelve times, crimson, bright yellow. And then is the time to talk, time to reason together, time to fill in love again, time to know what's going on in the little brain there on the other side of the fireplace, time to ask questions, time to laugh and time to sing old-fashioned heartsease songs.

No, no canned music before the fireplace; no ragtime ditties, either, please. Fair is well enough in other places, but not before the altar of a family fireplace.

"Should auld acquaintance," "Way down upon," "My lovely Eloise." "I'll remember you, dear, in my prayers."—oh, heart of mine, how can you ever have had the old song is heard!—"My own sweet Lily Dale"—in the songs your grandmother sang when the last century was young and we didn't have janitors and elevators and radiators and all the modern conveniences.

Come, let's light the fire, and sing together. The cold world waits outside; how soon will it claim you, little girl with the soft hair falling on your round cheek; how soon will it draw cruel lines in that fair face of yours, little boy with the dreaming eyes?

"Go where you will, on land or on sea, I'll share all your troubles and cares, And at night when I kneel at my bedside to pray

I'll remember you, dear, in my prayers."

Never mind if your voice does break a little. Fire and I'd keep a fine, tender face that smiled from the heart of the friendly fire just now?

Fall's coming, frost time, home time, heart time; let's all light the fire and get acquainted again.

HOPELESS

Maiden: Your thin, straggly hair can be made to come in thick and fluffy, if you avoid alkali shampoos. The most beneficial thing for cleansing scalp and hair is plain cantharis, a teaspoonful of which dissolved in a cup of hot water is enough for a delightful shampoo. You will find cantharis removes every atom of dust and dandruff, and after rinsing the hair will dry quickly and is easily managed. Use cantharis occasionally, and your hair will regain its original lustre and loveliness.

Puritan: You are right, Kardene is a remedy of grandmother's days, and is considered the best thing known as a blood-cleanser and body-builder. This old-fashioned tonic is made by dissolving a half-ounce of sugar in one-half pint alcohol, to which is added one ounce Kardene and enough hot water to make a full quart. The dose is a tablespoonful before meals. A treatment with this tonic will quickly rid the system of impurities, restore your health and appetite and build you up.

Dot: You cannot change the color of your eyes, but you can make them clear and sparkling by using a simple eye-tonic, made by dissolving an ounce of orpine in a pint of cold water. Two or three drops of this should be daily put into each eye. The orpine eye-tonic is splendid for sore, aching or tired eyes and granulated lids, and its use frequently does away with the necessity of wearing glasses.

Mrs. Ben: (1) It is gratifying to know that the kardene tonic has done so much for you. Stop using powder and try this simple lotion for the skin and I am sure you will be delighted: In a half-pint hot water dissolve four ounces spurmax, then add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. When this is cool apply sparingly to the face, neck and arms, rubbing lightly until dry. This spurmax lotion is splendid for freckles, and sunburn, oily skins, and when it removes all impurities. You will find the spurmax lotion lends a charm and softness to the complexion and is superior to powder, while it is invisible when on.

Legore: Don't worry. You can quickly regain your normal weight and symmetrical figure without fasting or indulging in violent exercises, if you will get from your druggist four ounces parsonin and dissolve in a pint-and-a-half hot water. When it cools take a tablespoonful before each meal. Continue this treatment till your weight is where you want it and you will find that the flesh is firm and the skin will not be wrinkled.

T. D.: A starved condition of the hair-roots causes the hair to grow dull, "stringy" and brittle, and unless a good tonic is employed, you cannot hope to have a fine head of hair. Make up and use this tonic and your hair will again take on its soft fluffiness and natural tint: Mix together one-half pint each of cologne and water and to this add one ounce quinozin. Massage into the scalp frequently and this lotion restores the healthy condition, and when this is done you will be troubled with dandruff or excess oil. Constant rubbing makes the hair grow in rich and abundant.

Mary: Your theory is right, powders and cosmetics very often cause blackheads and other skin eruptions, and cause the skin to grow coarse and lifeless. A thoroughly reliable cream-jelly for correcting complexion faults can be made at little cost by stirring two teaspoonfuls glycerine into a half-pint cold water, then adding one ounce almonds. Let remain until thoroughly dissolved, then apply freely to the face, neck and arms after removing the dust and grime. Massage into the skin and the skin will be soft and velvety. The daily use of this cream-jelly will soon free the skin of all impurities and lends a charming tint and youthfulness to the complexion.

Miss A.: You will find peroxin very good for making eyebrows grow thick and silky. Apply it night and morning, and for thin, straggly lashes, apply to lash-roots with thumb and forefinger. This means them grow in thick, silken and curly. Peroxin comes only in two-ounce and four-ounce packages, but use care and don't get any where but in the eye.

Grace: You need have no fear about hairs returning after using the depilatory paste. Any druggist can supply powdered delatone, and to remove hairs from face or neck, make a paste with a little delatone and water. Apply this to offending hairs and in two or three minutes scrape off and wash the skin. This removes every trace of hair and leaves the skin white and firm. You will have to pay a dollar an ounce for the delatone, and it is worth it.

MISS ADAMS IDEAL 'CHANTECLER'

Proves Big Success in Edmond Rostand's Symbolic Play at Hollis.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

The newest invasion of the symbolic drama carried us to the spot behind the bars where the fowl dwell in more or less noisy disorder—all of which made a good play for Maude Adams. The play "Chantecler," by Edmond Rostand, and Miss Adams ample material for her farm yard triumph at the Hollis last evening and while you could hardly call the entertainment suited to that overworked mythperson, the tired business man, you were bound to concede that Miss Adams brought the poetic drama to a new and most attractive to anyone with half an eye for the beautiful and the picturesque.

The warm charm of Miss Adams's acting was not lost upon last night's audience even if you were convinced that her splendid womanliness that has always captured theatregoers was rather out of place under the cock's feathers she wore so becomingly.

There is probably no American actress who possesses a greater womanly charm than Miss Adams, and while she appealed to the eye in "Chantecler," there was no eroding the thought that she was still feminine in spite of her bold speeches. But the charm that was audacious was still in evidence, however, and it was apparent that Miss Adams was in friendly company.

Brilliant Spectacle.

As a brilliant spectacle "Chantecler" ranked with the biggest productions of years, and while it preached a hidden sermon you received a full dose of delicious humor. It was a pretty tale of farm yard romance and tragedy, in which the cock looked upon himself too seriously, only to suffer a sudden awakening when he answered the sweet call of the Hen Pheasant. Chantecler was an important fowl—a leader of the crowing—until his night in the woods with the Hen Pheasant made him forget his morning song, it was the song that brought the sun out of the eastern horizon, so everybody believed. But Chantecler's fatal, forgetful morning brought an unexpected tragedy—the sun appeared just the same.

Miss Adams was a Chantecler with all the outward character and charm that you have noticed so often in the bold strutting of the chief fowl in a well stocked henery. But you couldn't forget her womanliness. She was a friendly cock with a good sense of humor and a deep conviction of the importance of a severe duty towards the rest of her, or his, companions. There was fine dramatic power in her reading, which she sustained through long and tiring speeches.

Most Unique of the Season.

The Hen Pheasant of Josephine Victor was agreeable to the eye, and the Blackbird of William Courtenay was brilliantly done. Paton, the dog, was intelligently played by George Henry Trader.

As Miss Adams explained in a little hands across the footlights speech before the rising of the curtain, the stage scenery was dropped between the audience and the stage. She prepared you for the farmyard scenes that revealed commonplace implements of agriculture in unusual places. Not only in the magnificence of the settings was your interest aroused, but in the amusing characters that moved about the stage. You laughed merrily at the chickens, who nestled safely beneath Chantecler's wings when danger appeared, and their mother was an incubator, it was explained—and the Dutch pot, everybody smiles without saying a word.

"Chantecler" will prove the most unique play of the season. While its novelty naturally interest it with any audience, Miss Adams gives it an acting quality that ranks it among the leading as an entertainment. Everyone should see it.

Keith's.

Keith's immense theatre was filled to overflowing last night when one of the best programs of the year was given. Everybody laughed and everybody applauded. There was not one dull number throughout the evening. Harry von Tilzer, in repertoire of his latest successes, made a decided hit, especially when he made the wonderful offer of gloves, tickets and even a husband to any girl in the audience who would come to the choice of "I Want a Girl." The gloves, the tickets and even the husband were won.

Taylor Granville's "The Holdup" was one of the strongest features of the evening, and a big strong one, too. The audience seemed to amuse and delight everybody. The acting was clever and the scenic effects good.

Among the first numbers was the Kino brothers, herculean athletes, in which was featured the bewilder. The Kino brothers do the Dive for Life. The Knight brothers and Marion Sawtelle in "Just Out," written by Aaron S. Hoffman entitled "The Fellow With the Green Umbrella," was decidedly mirth producing and put everybody into the very best humor for the remainder of the evening.

Grace Freeman, the late star of the "Country Girl," made a decided hit with her songs, and her costumes were exceedingly beautiful. The Three Keatons and Hayes and company in his new comedy sketch, "The Piano Mover," were decidedly refreshing, and the two French girls in their midnight bathing scene, mirth and feats in physical culture were wonders. There seemed to be nothing could not perform, and that of the triple display-ladder held all spellbound in amazement. Kaufman brothers were as usual much applauded.

Howard's musical ponies and equestrian dogs were amusing and entertaining.

National.

Standard comic opera has made a hit at the National Theatre, where the tuneful opera, "The Chimes of Normandy," is being presented this week by the National Boston Opera Company. The opera is a condensed version, or, as it is termed, a vaudeville production in which the best popular numbers are given. William Wolfe, J. K. Murray, Clara Lane, Marie Louise Gerald, Harry Davies and Miss May Murray looked like an all-star cast and completely made many of those present of the famous "Chimes of Normandy." The Castle Square Opera Company, William Wolf as Gaspard scored a distinct hit.

Miss Josephine Joy, the New England Conservatory of Music girl, who created a big success in New York last Summer, appeared in a musical comedy act, supported by a clever company and proved to be a headline attraction.

Grand Opera.

A real western drama, with real Sioux Indians, a bear and a pack of wolves, is this week's offering at the Grand Opera House in "Daniel Boone on the Trail." It is a thrilling play of pioneer days. The scenes are laid in the wilderness of Kentucky at the beginning of the Revolutionary War. Daniel Boone, the hero, has come from North Carolina, and a band of hostile Comanches are seen approaching him through a narrow pass of the barren scene of country, with a stream flowing magnificently at their heels. The burning of Boone's stockade and in the midst of all the Shawnee camp, the rescue of Boone from the Indians and the capture of the Indians are all thrilling.

A pretty love story runs through the whole play. Boone fails in love with Rose Bell, whom he has rescued from the Indians. He is opposed by Simon Girty for her hand. Elsmere shows disfavor of Girty with the result that he leaves the emigrant camp and casts his lot with the red men. He urges a merciless war against them. At the capture of the Reds. The climax comes when Boone rescues Elizabeth from the den of wolves after she was cast into them by Girty.

Colonel Harry K. Hamilton as Daniel Boone gave a fine impersonation of that character. F. Ernest Clarton as Simon Girty and Maude E. Robbins as Elizabeth gave very creditable performances. The play is a strong one.

Theatre Premier.

Mutt and Jeff are still very much in evidence at the theatre, as you will find at the Theatre Premier to-morrow when the motion picture version of these lively characters will be exhibited. The story of Jeff and the Unlucky Star" is the title of the picture in which they will be seen. The unlucky star is a sheriff's badge that gets these men all kinds of humorous difficulties.

Another big feature picture at the Premier to-morrow will be the new Erlair release, "Hinds Across the Sea." The first of the Keith's American productions. "Hinds Across the Sea" tells an interesting story of the Revolution and the part played in it by Lafayette and Rochambeau. Three other pictures of the many attractive pictures to be shown.

Gaiety Theatre.

"The Golden Girls" enlivened things at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday, and those who attended either of the two performances found the entertainment more than agreeable. As the name of the piece implies, handsome young women were conspicuous during the two acts, and with a musical Irishman and Hebrew adding to the complications there was a large measure of fun for everybody. "The Chicago Girls" is worth seeing.

Grand Opera House.

"The Girl of the Streets" will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House next week.

Casino Theatre.

The Behman show, with Florence Mills as the principal star, is the attraction at Walsom's Casino Theatre yesterday. Miss Mills made everybody acquainted with the excellence of her voice.

Orpheum Theatre.

The new bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday included the Schillings, expert rifle shooters; Mignon Kohler, in a pianologue; Claus and Hoffman, German comedians, and a number of other entertainers. There was also a new picture program.

Scenic Temple.

A new program of vaudeville and motion pictures was presented at the Scenic Temple yesterday. Several novelties were on the bill.

South End Theatre.

Several novelties that made a distinct hit with yesterday's audiences were among the new programs offered at the Scenic's South End Theatre. Besides the vaudeville features there was an interesting exhibition of motion pictures.

Austin & Stone's.

Miss Sophie Duval did things at Austin & Stone's Museum yesterday that established the day's audiences. She reclined upon a bed of nails (none upwards and sustained a weight of 700 pounds on her body.

Hub Theatre.

The regular change of bill at the Hub Theatre yesterday brought several attractive vaudeville novelties to the house. There was also a long list of new pictures.

Howard Athenaeum.

"Miss New York, Jr." was at the Old Howard yesterday with a lot of new burlesque entertainment, which included, of course, about twenty attractive young women. The entertainment was enjoyed by two big audiences, and a prosperous week is ahead.

Plays That Held Over.

"Ben Hur" continues at the Boston Theatre, where the demand for seats will undoubtedly prolong the engagement beyond Christmas.

"The Miss Princess" with Elsie Janis, began its second week at the Colonial Theatre last evening. Miss Janis was never in more delightful form. Adv.

"Everywoman," with its wonderful photographic effects and realistic setting, is now at the Majestic Theatre last evening. Adv.

"Madame Sherry" is now in its fifth week at the Tremont. Lina Abarbanell and the clever principals keep the play moving merrily.

There appears to be no slacking in the popularity of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," which is still enjoying capacity audiences at the Park.

"Mutt and Jeff" entered upon its second week at the Globe Theatre last evening. It is one of the funniest bits of the year.

"The End of the Bridge" is still at the Castle Square Theatre, where it began its second week last evening. The play has been one of Mr. Crain's biggest successes.

The quaint and humorous "Peasmaker Walk" began a new week at the Plymouth Theatre last evening. It is one of the most delightful of comedies.

"The Blue Bird" continues its prosperous career at the Shubert Theatre. The engagement has been extended to December 9.

Next Week's Plays.

"Before and After will be given by Mr. Hurtig's company at the Castle Square next week.

DECKER HELD FOR PERJURY

George S. Decker, a Boston newspaper man, was arrested Friday and later arraigned in the Middlesex Superior Court before Judge McLaughlin on charges alleging perjury and criminal libel. The arrest was made by Silas P. Smith, attached to the staff of District Attorney Higgins of Middlesex, on a secret indictment returned by the Middlesex Grand Jury, while made an investigation into the so-called graft cases in Middlesex County offices.

The libel case growing out of the investigation was that of Jackson Palmer, the Lowell lawyer. The second action on the charge brought against the Boston Journal, and the libel was against Robert Burns, head of a local detective bureau. Both cases remained yesterday.

Decker and Decker was represented by Attorney Proctor of Nason & Proctor. The reading of the indictment was waived, and the defendant's lawyer asked for two weeks' time in which to prepare and file a motion with the Court.

Yes," Deputy Attorney Higgins demurred. He said his opposition was based on the fact that he was ready on all the cases at this term of the court. Judge McLaughlin ruled that Decker should have at least ten days. He was held under bail of $500 on each count. Cash bail was furnished.

NEW SCHOLARSHIPS AT BOWDOIN COLLEGE

BRUNSWICK, Me., Nov. 21.—A total enrolment of 333 in the academic department and eighty-three in the medical department is shown by the Bowdoin College catalogue. Three new scholarships were announced. They are the Richard Woodbull scholarship of $10,000, given by Mrs. Mary A. W. Perry, to Bowdoin and maintain a scholarship in memory of her father, the Rev. Richard Woodbull of the class of 1827; the Dana Estes scholarship, which is a bequest of $2,500, and the Edward P. Moody scholarship, a bequest of $2,000 from Miss Ida A. Blanchard of Portland.

LOSE ALL TRACE OF BROOKLINE MAN

All trace of George B. P. Paull, the Brookline expressman who disappeared from the district in that town on October 9, has been lost. From the time he left the National Lancers' armory in Bulfinch street until the present time he has been seen or heard of by no one. He was last seen there about 6 o'clock in the evening of the day he disappeared. It is reported to the police by one of Paull's friends that the latter had remarked on that occasion that he needed a vacation. He left a wife and three children and is almost on the verge of a nervous collapse. She refuses to believe that her husband has met with foul play. The police are still searching for him.

20 SOLDIERS HURT IN FREIGHT COLLISION

LOGAN, Ia., Nov. 21.—Twenty United States soldiers were injured here when a special train, en route from San Francisco to Chicago on the Illinois Central Railroad, collided head-on with a west-bound freight train. Two of the soldiers are fatally injured. Engineer Haviland, of the special, was badly scalded and Fireman Bell badly injured. The wreck is said to be due to a failure on the part of the telegraph operator to deliver a held order to the special. The soldiers came from the Philippines.

COTTON CROP SHOWS 11,269,986 BALES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—A report of the Census Bureau on the cotton crop shows that 11,269,986 bales, counting round as half bales, were ginned from the growth of 1911 to November 4, as compared with 8,-749,309 bales for 1910, 11,449,000 for 1909, last two crops ginned to November 14 is 75.9 for 1911 and 85.5 for 1909. Round bales included this year are 76,011, compared with 56,366 for 1910 and 125,757 for 1909. Sea Island included 71,199 for 1911, 52,851 for 1910 and 68,485 for 1909.

AMERICAN BANKERS GET LIBERIAN LOAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The State Department has been advised that the Liberian Legislature has ratified the $1,000,000 loan agreement made with American bankers. Fred Fuller Clarke of New Hampshire will be appointed receiver of the Liberian customs.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Because J. P. Morgan has recently taken charge of the stock market the bears tried to give him apoplexy. As this had little effect they gave President Taft pneumonia.

All departments of the bond market are now reflecting a distinct improvement in sentiment, and sales of securities over-the-counter are increasing steadily. The continued ease of money and the gradual improvement in sentiment lead bankers and bond dealers to believe that the demand will continue good.

All trade reports agree that the copper metal market is really better, and that the improvement this line is not imagination. Consumers seem to have but small stocks on hand, and they are purchasing more and more eagerly as the price advances. The foreign demand continues without abatement. The home demand is growing.

Decline in Wabash is easily accounted for by its own poor earnings and its known shortage of equipment. The company has only $1,000 to buy money with which to buy equipment. The banking syndicate in connection with the Gould roads is said that the company hesitates to issue equipment trust certificates.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

HEAVY BUYING JUMPS COPPERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The copper group led in an important at the opening of the stock market to-day, the buying coming from a number of sources. Amalgamated Copper and American Smelter showed respective gains of 1¾ and 3, later Smelter gained ⅝ additional, making its total advance a full point. Substantial advances were made in many important issues at the outset. Steel common opened at 63¾, or above Monday's close, they immediately sold down to 63⅝, 1¼ above last night's final quotation.

Union Pacific, one of the strongest stocks in the railroad section, opened at 173¾, then gained ⅝ additional, making its advance since the close the first hour 1¾ points. The Wabash issues soared in the improvement. Other gains were Southern Pacific ¾, Lehigh Valley ¾, Reading ¾ and Erie common ⅝. Traders attributed the strength in coppers to trader reports which show great improvement in that market. Consumers of copper are purchasing liberally.

The rails opened quiet and steady with Standard Oil unchanged and American Tobacco three points lower.

CHILDREN CLEAN BROCKTON YARDS

BROCKTON, Nov. 21.—School children continued to-day the task of cleaning back yards throughout the entire city. It is the first campaign of the kind ever attempted in Massachusetts.

Armed with shovels, rakes and hoes, the boys and girls cleaned their own back yards as well as those of their neighbors. The city has been divided into districts, and each day carts collect the refuse. If the Board of Health cart the dirt away. The campaign will be continued throughout this week.

The novel campaign was originated by President Arthur H. Andrews of the Chamber of Commerce and put into effect by William N. Hardy, the new secretary. For several days Secretary Hardy spent much time addressing teachers and pupils at the schools in regard to the work, and his efforts will be successful if the children retain their interest throughout the week.

As soon as the schools were closed for the day hundreds of boys and girls began on a systematic assault on the back yards. In starting the campaign under way the Chamber of Commerce was assisted by the Teachers' Committee, while approval was given by the officials of the Board of Health and council of charities.

There was some objection on the ground that it may be a menace to health, but result in boys and girls carrying contagious diseases from place to place, but noted experts in Boston and other cities decided there was no risk.

Secretary Hardy personally supervised the work, advising the boys what they had to do. Well-organized groups under his direction made rapid progress in the work.

International Recognition of the Hearst Newspapers

The astonishing recognition of the national and international importance of the Hearst newspapers in every field of human endeavor has been a distinct incident in the history of the times.

This has been attested in a series of remarkable letters and memorials addressed to these newspapers by great men and great movements in every land.

But yesterday the vast empire of China, awaking from the slumber of despotic centuries, flings off the burden of imperial rule and decrees a popular government upon the wreck of the Manchu dynasty. And Wu Ting-fang, scholar, diplomat and statesman, in a personal cable to William Randolph Hearst, selected the Hearst newspapers among all publications as the medium through which the new Republic of China should make its appeal for recognition throughout the world.

The army and the navy of United Italy, under the sharp and unwarranted persecution of the English, the German and the American press, voiced the appeal of Italy's Premier, of its commanding general, and of its most illustrious admiral for international justice and fair play directly and primarily through the columns of the Hearst newspapers.

When Rudyard Kipling, the English poet, assailed in bitter vein the character and spirit of universal womanhood, Hall Caine, England's greatest novelist, sent his eloquent and now famous defence of the insulted sex straight to the world through the columns of the Hearst newspapers.

When the Reciprocity Bill, the greatest economic measure of the year's legislation in any land, passed the American Senate and the American House, William Howard Taft, President of the United States and official leader of that great movement, transmitted a most fervent expression of thanks for transcendent service in this cause to the Hearst newspapers.

When the great movement for popular government and the re-enthronement of the people in power received its mighty expression in 1910 in the extraordinary landslide of progressive Democracy, the triumphant Governors of four States—Plaisted, of Maine; Foss, of Massachusetts; Baldwin, of Connecticut, and Harmon, of Ohio—telegraphed in person to William Randolph Hearst their fervent appreciation of the paramount newspaper service which had contributed, above every other force, to their victorious campaign.

When the ballots of Chicago swept Carter Harrison into office as the reform Mayor of the great metropolis of the Central Union, Carter Harrison telegraphed his first expression of thanks to Mr. Hearst and his two Chicago newspapers.

When Blankenburg, that sturdy old Republican patriot and reformer, the other day broke the back of Philadelphia's colossal machine of graft and greed, and rode over the heads of the bosses into the Mayor's chair, he sped on the lightning his grateful recognition of the reforming and compelling influence of the New York American.

The Panama Exposition has ascribed to the Hearst newspapers the largest influence in locating that World Fair upon the Pacific Coast.

Successful men in the leadership of great reform movements have paid tribute to the power of these columns for every good cause of human justice and public honesty.

And the people, in thousands and tens of thousands, in organizations and as individuals, have voiced their grateful and high appreciation for service consistently and effectively rendered in their behalf.

Expressions like these indicate not only the wide activity of the Hearst newspapers, but the position that they are coming to occupy, not only in the estimation of the best people of our own country, but from leaders of thought and action throughout the civilized world.

And these responses from the illustrious and the lowly, from States and statesmen, in our own country and from other countries, afford a rich and exceeding reward for journalistic energy and labor highly purposed, and a deeper and more inspiring incentive to continued endeavor for the future in the mighty interests and noble enterprises of humanity.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

KEEP CHILDREN OFF THE STREETS

Editor AMERICAN:

I have just read Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst's article on the "Undoing of the Children in the Streets," and cannot refrain from expressing my hearty indorsement of it. Something must be done to save our boys and girls from the influences of the street—which is bad, very bad. The curfew should be rung ordering the children off the streets not later than nine o'clock, but, better still, at eight o'clock. There are without doubt thousands of parents who are only too willing to give their children the freedom of the streets, so that they—the parents—can have more time for their pleasures, and also have relief from their sacred responsibilities.

This subject should interest every self-respecting parent throughout the country. Ministers should bring the matter before their congregations. In fact, every christian and humanitarian organization should be interested in it. The Board of Education should advocate the "curfew."

Dr. Parkhurst's article is most timely, and under no circumstances should the subject be ignored. The children can't save themselves, but we, their elders and parents, can do something toward saving them.

A PARENT.

FROM AN ITALIAN FRIEND

Editor AMERICAN:

Your editorial concerning the Italian-Turkish war represents the real and most truthful views in which the whole Tripolitanian affair should be considered.

Papers which ignore facts and history might learn something from your condensed yet able article, while the authority of your pen will carry into all the States the unquestionable truth.

Italy and all the Italians of the United States will appreciate to its full extent the generous impulse of your defence—a defence based on the rights of a whole people so long abused, on the supreme laws of humanity, civilization and progress. Time will give Italy full justice and she will prove then to the world that it was for her a long-waited humanitarian duty. I thank you in my name and in the name of all Italians who are confident that a final success will crown all Italy's efforts in her enterprise.

Ex-Gov. Long Praises New England Thanksgiving

By HON. JOHN D. LONG

Former Governor of Massachusetts and former Secretary of the Navy.

From the Congregationalist and Christian World

A MAN must have been born in a New England village more than a generation ago to know the full old time flavor of Thanksgiving Day. Then was the day of the "old home." Then families were large. Flocks of boys and girls were in evidence and filled the half dozen or more scattered schoolhouses which since then have become so depopulated that most of them have been abandoned, and the vastly diminished number of successors of firmer crowds of scholars are carted back and forth in a single omnibus to some more precentious structure at the village centre. Then holidays were rare. New Year's Day and Washington's birthday and even Christmas, still under the blight of the old Puritan protest, were for the most part unobserved. Fast Day had no significance in the way of its recognition, except possibly a sermon or, if the snow was off the ground, a game of ball. The Fourth of July was an outdoor celebration, often in quiet as a Sunday after the old swivel had been fired off at sunrise.

The crowning festival of the year was Thanksgiving—the festival of the fireside—when the apples and pumpkins had been gathered, when the early snowflakes had fallen and when grandfather and grandmother and Uncle Isaac and Aunt Betsy were invited to dinner and any boy who had strayed away to an occupation elsewhere came back with the appetite of a hound and burst in at the kitchen door with a shout and got the hearty home greeting. It was "Hello, Mother" —nobody then said "Mamma"—and, "Well, if that ain't you, Sam." Then the "beef critter" had been killed and his quarters stored for the winter's only supply of fresh meat. The hog that had grunted all Summer in his pen and grown fat had gone under the butcher's knife; souse and sausage had sent their appetising odor through the house, and the pork barrel was full. "Mother" and "the girls"—there were no servants—for days previous had been making marvelous constructions of mince and apple and pumpkin pies. The turkey flanked one end of the table and a huge chicken pie the other. The small boy, already gorged, when his aunt shyly asked him which kind of pie he would have, as if he could have but one, timidly but eagerly answered back, "All three."

The Good Old Days

I love to think of it as a golden or Arcadian provincial age. The population in the rural districts was entirely native. They were all of the Pilgrim or Puritan stock. A resident foreigner in our village was unknown. The German fiefsrew peddler who once a year came through with his pack on his back—his grandsons are now probably New York millionaires—was as much an object of curious interest as the annual circus. It was a pure democracy. There were no large fortunes, and the very rare man who was "worth" ten thousand dollars was "passing rich." But he was no better than the man who mowed his hay or chopped his wood. The pauper was a rara bird. And yet there was little money in circulation. Clothes were made at home, and groceries and calico were bartered over the trader's counter for dried apples and pelts and heavy woolen stockings knit over the Winter fire. The town meeting and the wrestling ring on Saturday afternoon were the public occasions. Politics were discussed in the shoe shops and round the stove of the country store. And I fancy that the discussion differed little in ability or discrimination from that around the Cabinet table in the White House at Washington. The meeting-house—never then called the church—was better filled certainly than nowadays. Children read the Bible, and its phraseology theological then later speech, whereas many of the children of today never read it, and to them the delight of the old Bible stories is a lost literature. If I were a teacher of English in a college I would make my students commit and repeat a psalm at every recitation.

Peace was over the land, not only the peace of arms, but the peace of social and industrial classes. There was no such term as the "masses."

There was no array of capital and labor, no trusts, hardly a corporation, rarely a city, no stock market betting like a cauldron. The transcendentalists were organizing and instituting their "communities." The poets were singing, and Whittier and Bryant were embodying in their verse the charm and sensuity and gentle ideals of New England life and nature. And Thanksgiving Day was the consummation of all.

Looking back we, of course, forget the evil things, the dangers and vexations of the old time, and we recall only its idyllics. May it not be that now we comparatively exaggerate the dangers and vexations of the present and somewhat fail to appreciate the blessings of our time for which Thanksgiving is still due? Of course the problems that are upon us are terrific. Social and political and commercial convulsions threaten disaster. Greed and graft and crime and impunity stalk. But myriad springs and streams of counteracting and redeeming influences are afloat, and unnumbered good men and good women, in congested city centres and in the rural fields, are at work as never before, restraining intemperance, inspiring social purity, uplifting, reforming, enlightening.

The Advance

It is not the immediate step, however much it counts, that wholly counts. Through all the choking dust is the steady advancing march towards the higher life and better things. It is the slow but sure widening of the thoughts of men with the progress of the suns. Each note to-day and its exposure however mortifying and disheartening, each financial dishonesty, each corrupt indelicity to the trust of office or of property, each political prostitution, taken in connection with the scrutiny and attack that unearth it, with the outraged and aroused public sentiment that pursues and punishes it, and with the reform that follows it, is a step forward.

If the old provincial and exclusively native possession has passed, it is because it has shared itself with the whole world and opened an asylum for all who seek its blessings and to whom its abundance and better living have gone out.

What an advance in common education for all, in avenues opening wider and wider to higher pursuits, in household comforts, in relief from excessive hours of labor, in easy and cheap conveyance making the seashore and the interior landscape all the people's playground, in postal and wire communication, in emancipation of religious thought and human bondage, in the wide outreaching variety and abundance of charity!

For all this let us be thankful. Let us be thankful for the free and enlightened and prosperous government under which we live. It recognises the equal rights of citizens. It cares with tender solicitude for its sick or insane or criminal or poor. It, on the one hand, stimulates enterprise and industry and the effective combination of forces for their development, and, on the other, checks with a firm hand their overreach, regulates, not crushing them. It has been to foreign lands an example and a spur of popular enfranchisement, and has made our country to-day a shining light encircling the world far more significantly than the drum-beat in Webster's famous word picture. It is leading in its cause of international peace and the abandonment of war. Its unparalleled beneficence in its recent rehabilitation and internal development of Cuba and the Philippines, transmitting them from pestilence to health, from ignorance to knowledge, from oppression to local self-government and to the safeguards of our own constitutional guarantees of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness—all at its own cost—has set the finest example in all history of international altruism. And in its present national executive head it presents the ideal of an honest, high-minded, faithful public servant who represents the best instincts and the purest hopes and the most righteous endeavors of the people whose interests are in his hands.

For all these things, as we gather round the Thanksgiving board, let us thank God.

He Writes About Going to a Show

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

PA took Ma & me to a funny show last nite. Ma wanted to go & see a big show, but Pa told her that he wanted us to go with him & Billy Gane & see a new star which has sprung up on the horizon, & he is making them all talk, sed Pa. We musent miss this grand opportunity, Pa sed.

Ma & me dident like it very well, but Ma told me that if we dident go whare Pa wanted us for to go we wuddent go anyware at all, so we went with Pa.

The star that Mister Billy Gane tould Pa about was a slim man. He dident talk deep like Pa, but he was most graceful. He calm out on the stage and sang sum songs & he tould the peepul thare how the girl he loved had rejected him. Then he tould the peepul how he had sued the girl for breech of promis, & how the jury had sed that he wasent entitled to anything, unless maybe it mite be thirty days & a chanst to pay the costs.

Now, sed Ma, now you see, that is what a man gits for suing a lady. He ought to have got sum. Ma sed, instead of being here in a theeter telling how a girl kissed him on his right eye. If I had been that girl, sed Ma, I wud go & git my big brother or sum other regular man, & I wud have tuold them to try thare fist on his left eye, jest for a change.

I agree with you, madam, sed Billy Gane. I think you are rite, but a lot of peepul thought that they wud like to git a look at a man that wud sue a lady for breech of promise, so I thought I wud cater to them.

I see, sed Ma, but after listening to that song which he jest sang, about how to get called him on the tulus & then throw him down, I shud think that you wud let him sue you for breech of promis, too.

How do you meen? sed Billy Gane.

I meen, sed Ma, that I wud forgit to give him the mitey that I promised to give him, & that wud give him a chanst to sue uggens.

That is a funny suggestion, madam, sed Mister Gane, & with that my principles wud let me set on it, but I guess I outs as well pay him wen his wife is in a hi chair, sez he. Yes & fern, sed Mister Grane. Next week I think I will cut out these celebrits & git sum trained seals for hed-liners.

Oh, wife, sed Pa, look at that pritty girl dancing now, can you find her naim on tim program? What grace, sed Pa, what wunderful grace! Every move is a picter, Pa sed, jest think what a contrast she is to the other.

Maybe so, sed Ma, but it was the other that you calm to see, not any blood beauty. Calm, the nite is growing old, we must away.

So we awayed.
